CHIEF MINISTER MESSAGE

It is with great joy that we commence the 8th edition of the Bengaluru International Film Festival, which will be held from January 28th to February 4th, 2016

The Government of Karnataka supports the Karnataka Chalanachitra Academy's on-going effort to sustain a healthy film culture across the State. BIFFES has been one of the most successful and significant platforms for the development of film culture and this year, in its 8th iteration, this important cultural event has been expanded to include the city of Mysuru, which will enjoy screenings of the films simultaneously. It is our aim to maintain the spotlight on BIFFES in the global cultural arena and therefore, we are committed to increasing its infrastructural resources in accordance with this mandate. It is our sincere wish that the Bengaluru International Film Festival would continue to attract important films and filmmakers to Bengaluru, thereby turning it into a veritable film capital.

I am confident that cineastes, students of media and communication and film professionals will support this endeavour by whole heartedly participating in its success.

Siddaramaiah
Hon'ble Chief Minister
Government of Karnataka

MINISTER FOR INFORMATION MESSAGE

It is wonderful to welcome the very best in Kannada and world cinema to the 8th Bengaluru International Film Festival, which will take place from January 28th – Feb 4th, 2016.

Bengalureans will have the unique opportunity to be introduced to filmmakers and special guests during this week. In a departure from past years, this year's festival will be inaugurated by the screening of a celebrated Kannada film, THITHI. The remaining programming continues to offer a stellar selection of films to the public. We anticipate enthusiastic participation from the audience who are the very reason for mounting this ambitious event each year. This year, we showcase a film shot on an iPhone, which is a testament to the growing accessibility of filmmaking. At the same time, there are films that are feats of impressive sophistication, which use all the technological advancements available in the industry. It is with immense pride that we offer a programme that encompasses the diversity of artistic and technological excellence to cinema lovers across the city.

The Bengaluru International Film Festival stands for many things, but perhaps the most important is freedom of expression, which is being threatened all over the world. We dedicate the festival to the global voices that stand up against this injustice and our goal is to provide a space in which these voices can be heard sans censorship.

Among the new facets that have been introduced this year, the documentary section holds a special place. There is also section of films dedicated to Drought, which is an issue of great concern in our State. Last but not least, is the special section on biographical pictures, generally referred to as "BIOPICS" which includes documentaries made on filmmakers, Writers, Artists and Musicians.

Kannada movies continue to face challenging times due to the heavy competition from other cinema in other languages. This challenge is not unique to Kannada films, as it is one that affects all regional cinemas. Our goal for BIFFES is to strengthen the Kannada film industry by showcasing cutting edge work from filmmakers working in this language today.

We encourage the public to enjoy the Kannada competition and other titles at BIFFES this year.

R. Roshan Baig
Minister for Information, Infrastructure & Haj
Government of Karnataka

SECRETARY MESSAGE

From January 28th to February 4th the city of Bengaluru will once again bring together film lovers at the much-awaited Bengaluru International Film Festival, now in its 8th edition.

For one week, we invite the public to enjoy a calendar packed with screenings, celebrations and workshops. We are pleased to have filmmakers from all over the world congregating at this prestigious annual event, which has become a permanent addition to the city's annual cultural calendar.

It is inspiring to observe the festival rise up in the global film festival circuit by constantly making changes to provide the best selection of Kannada, regional, national and world cinema to our faithful public. BIFFES has made significant changes to provide an improved experience to the audience, and I invite the residents of our vibrant city to attend the festival and show support for a unique event that strives to promote a robust film culture.

The number of submissions received this year has been overwhelming. We have seen a 100% increase in the films that were sent in for consideration. This goes to prove the importance of the festival in the global cultural landscape. The Government will continue to enhance the physical and intellectual infrastructure of this festival so that it may address the year-round interest that it receives from filmmakers and the public.

There is a call to action to the relevant departments and the Karnataka Chalanachitra Academy to invest time and financial support in order to bridge the gaps. Most importantly, our mission is to create a permanent festival office to handle queries on an on-going basis.

Over and above the incentives already given to the Karnataka Film Industry we hope that the festival will continue to receive incentives to build upon the significant work that it aims to fulfil.

Welcome to yet another excellent year at BIFFES!

Dr. N.S. Channappa Gowda, IAS
Secretary, Department of Information,
Public Relations, Kannada & Culture
Government of Karnataka

CHAIRMAN MESSAGE

To all the participating filmmakers, delegates, jury members and special guests, we wish you a warm welcome to the 8th edition of the Bengaluru International Film Festival.

I would like to first take the opportunity to express my sincere thanks to our honourable Chief Minister, Siddaramaiah, who has been an unwavering pillar of support to our festival by consistently accepting all our requests. His generosity towards the film industry has helped the cinema of our state flourish, through film subsidies and tax exemptions, among other benefits. Recently, he has allotted 146 acres for a hi-tech film city to be created in Mysuru, to help the local industry grow and thrive. Through his leadership, we are proud to conduct a parallel festival in Mysuru, which will showcase the films screening in Bengaluru at the same time, and play host to the Closing Night Film Screening. Our Chief Minister, acting as the Honorary President of the film festival organization committee for the first time this year, has steered our Film Festival towards even greater success.

Film festivals provide the public with a forum for dialogue and engagement and this is our mission at BIFFES. Moreover, this festival of cinema allows windows into worlds that might otherwise be out of bounds, by presenting diverse landscapes from across the globe. This invaluable experience is offered to all film lovers who attend BIFFES each year, through a wide range of cinema thoughtfully selected from every corner of the world. In fact, there is something for cineastes of every age at BIFFES, which will present films that have premiered at prestigious international film festivals. Closer to home, our offering of Kannada Cinema is no less impressive. The lingering perfume from sandalwood will spread to this world forum through a bouquet of selected Art house cinema, mainstream films and culturally significant works. In addition, there will be a couple of world premieres and presentation of films that have featured in other International forums. It is a source of great pleasure that this global festival is opening with the Kannada film, THITHI, by Raam Reddy, which has garnered major international awards in Locarno and other important film festivals. This in itself is a tribute to the growing influence of BIFFES on the Kannada cinema scenario.

Our on-going mission at the Karnataka Chalanachitra Academy is to encourage the delegates to participate in the developing film culture of the city.

Wishing all the filmmakers and the delegates a successful festival and great film watching.

S.V. Rajendra Singh Babu
Chairman, Karnataka Chalanachitra Academy

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR MESSAGE

It gives us immense pleasure to bring to you a new edition of the Bengaluru International Film Festival, to be held from January 28th – Feb 4th, 2016.

In the eight years since its inception, BIFFES has established itself as an important fixture on the international film festival scene, due to the high standards in programming, organizational upgrades and the enthusiastic participation of audiences. The festival is a magnet for both film lovers and industry members, and we expect to maintain audience participation through various streamlined processes in effect during this edition.

We will be screening a programme of more than 170 films from 61 countries at a single venue this year. This will take place across 11 screens at the Orion Mall in Rajajinagar. In addition, films will also be screened in Mysuru over 4 Inox screens in the Mall of Mysuru, simultaneous to the Bengaluru screenings.

The selection of workshops and master-classes has been enhanced to include eminent speakers and experts in their respective fields, and a wide range of subjects relevant to the needs of the film industry.

Our endeavour is to grow the festival each year and to this end, we have undertaken significant measures to provide festival delegates with the best possible film viewing experience. We hope that you will enjoy what is in store and wish you a fruitful and fun-filled week at BIFFES.

N.R. Vishukumar
Director, Department of Information
Government of Karnataka
and Festival Executive Director

ARTISTIC DIRECTOR MESSAGE

The 8th Bengaluru International Film Festival is ready to take-off from January 28th to February 4th, 2016. The newest addition to BIFFES - simultaneous screenings in Mysuru - make this the most ambitious year for the festival yet, but I am confident that both events will be a huge success.

It is a matter of some pride that the cultural heritage of this State is reflected by the success of BIFFES, which continues to deliver celebrated cinema to the residents of this film-loving city. Bengaluru has demonstrated its singular ability for appreciating global culture while also nurturing its own local culture. The number of Kannada films in the competition section highlights the new generation of Kannada filmmakers that are on the rise, and one of the chief concerns of the festival is to support and encourage these creators by providing them with a discerning audience and the recognition that they deserve.

The parallel event in Mysuru is certain to foster a new public for these films and reinforce the state's commitment to boost quality Kannada cinema on a world stage. This is the surest means to ensuring that the heritage and culture that we hold dear travels far beyond the borders of the State.

On this momentous occasion, I welcome all the filmmakers, industry guests and audience members, and hope that they have a meaningful week at BIFFES.

Dr. Jaimala
Artistic Director

EXECUTIVE ARTISTIC MESSAGE

Film, the edifice of film festival, is first and foremost a social construction. As Alex Fisher, a Research scholar on analytics of Film festivals and Dynamics of World cinema conceptualizes, film festival is an ephemeral event founded on social connectivity, a meeting between films and different kinds of public whose participation depends on that of others. Directors, the Public, Critics, International Marketing professionals, The film fraternity, Partnering media and Public authorities are all connected by shared needs that the festival meets. Each party takes part in accordance with the benefits they hope to gain from the participation of others, sometimes in commercial measures but mostly of intellectual value. A shared democratic space where Technology, Economics, Culture and Art coalesce.

BIFFES in its 8th edition understands its huge responsibility not only to the medium and its creative and productive processes but also to the discerning audiences. It is also aware of its increasing visibility across the globe. The fact that it received over 900 entries within a matter of a fortnight of its announcement, demands greater accountability to the city cine goers in setting far higher benchmarks in selection of films and its presentations. The competence in adjusting to the new modes of digital projection system at BIFFES and its consequent enhancement of cinematic experience driven by the enthusiasm of the new generation of cineastes who are involved with the festival is indeed a tribute to the city of Bengaluru, the technology hub of India. Despite the overbearing nature of socio political conflicts in the global arena, the essence of life pervading through mundane day to day living articulated in a simple and without frills formats are at the centre of focus in this festival. Films like "DEGRADE", "MUSTANG" under the contemporary world cinema or the Naturalistic Kannada cinema "THITHI" which is a sensational discovery across the World film festivals scenario this season and of course the films under Vintages by Masters of cinema Mrinal Sen and Adoor Gopalakrishnan bear testimony to this theme.

There is deep concern about Climate Change and consequential drought on one side in the physical world and the scorched feeling in the metaphysical space for plurality and tolerance on the other. There are efforts in the festival to understand sincerely these natural and intellectual vagaries through films in different sections of the festival. A new section featuring documentary films have been started in this edition to accommodate the emerging interest in this genre of socially relevant documentation of reality and the Academic discourse on Free speech and expression show cases films that depict challenges to freedoms. The academic activities further extends to areas of film making like understanding concepts in sound design, Cinematography, Scripting, Direction, emerging technologies like VFX and Film Criticism. All in all, the festival promises a full spectrum of possibilities of the medium.

N Vidyashankar
Executive Artistic Director

ABOUT THE DIRECTOR

Raam Reddy, a 25 year old writer-director-producer, studied in St. Stephen's College, New Delhi. During his time at St. Stephen's, Raam passionately pursued photography, writing and film. He won numerous photography competitions, started writing his debut novel, and also wrote and directed several short films. In 2011, Raam made the Telugu short film, which won national and international awards. After completing IKA Raam went on to study Direction in Prague Film School. Upon returning from Prague, Raam started developing his debut feature in collaboration with Eregowda, an artistically ambitious Kannada film titled THITHI. The film won two top awards at the prestigious Locarno Film Festival in Switzerland in Aug 2015: the Golden Leopard, Filmmakers of the Present Competition and the Swatch First Feature Award. It had previously been awarded the best fiction feature in the Work-in-Progress Lab of the NFDC Film Bazaar in Goa in Nov 2014.

Synopsis

In a remote village in South India, three generations of sons react to the death of Century Gowda, their grandfather, a 101-year-old man. Century Gowda's son, Gadappa (the Beard-man), is a little old man who nonchalantly wanders through the village fields, always smoking cheap cigarettes and sipping brandy. At the same time, Gadappa's materialistic son, Thamanna, plots to illegally sell Century Gowda's five-acre property even though the land officially belongs to his father, while Thamanna's son, Abhi, a confident teen, relentlessly pursues an attractive shepherd girl. The three storylines intertwine before converging at Century Gowda's "Thithi", the final funeral celebration eleven days after a death.

ABOUT THE DIRECTOR

Born in Hyderabad, India in 1967, Nagesh first worked as a process technician in the chemical industry in the USA before taking acting and directing workshops at the Warehouse Actor's Theatre in Atlanta. In 1998 he used his personal savings to make his first feature, HYDERABAD BLUES, which became one of India's most successful low budget films and screened in sold-out cinemas for 31 weeks in Mumbai alone. His subsequent films have been as successful as his debut. Nagesh is also known for ROCKFORD (1999), IQBAL (2005), AASHAYEIN (2010) and LAKSHMI (2014). In 2006, he received the National Film Award for Best Film on Other Social Issues, for IQBAL and later, he received the Mercedes Benz Audience Award for Best Narrative at the Palm Springs International Film Festival for LAKSHMI.

Synopsis

Ten-year-old Pari and her blind younger brother Chotu are inseparable. She holds his hand whenever they roam about the place together. Pari has promised her brother that he will be able to see again when he turns nine, but they have no money for an operation. With Chotu's birthday approaching Pari has to think of something. A line on a poster of the film star Shah Rukh Khan convinces her this is the man who will help her brother. When Pari learns that Shah Rukh Kahn is making a film 300 kilometres away in the desert, she and little Chotu set off. They struggle down many a dusty road. Encouraged by their unswerving optimism, the pair experience a fairy-tale like odyssey through an impoverished land that still exudes magic, everywhere. Their zest for life is contagious and irresistible.

Synopsis

A look at the very real possibility of what could happen to a city if the scarcity of water escalates to the worst possible outcome. An entire city in a state of panic, where the goal to reinstate normalcy is taken up by citizens and officials alike. Everybody joins hands to put the system back on track in this narrative, which imagines the problem and presents the solution as well. This film should serve as an eye-opener to the public, who perhaps don't even realize that they are already in the midst of a cataclysm.

ಸಾಲದ ಮಗು CHILD OF DEBT

Saalada Magu

Synopsis

Ranga, a farm hand who is working to clear his debt, succumbs to an illness that leaves him incapacitated. It is now up to Subba, the son, to repay his father's debt. Subba's carefree existence, roaming the hills and valleys, is disrupted, and he begins to lose his innocence and cheerfulness. His easygoing friendship with Oba, the landlord's son, is tainted by feudal undertones. No longer are the two boys equals who play and frolic in the woods and the streams. SAALADA MAGU is a look at the web of debt and feudal authority that draws people into a deadly spiral, despite the bounty of nature.

DEVARA NAADALLI

2015 / 106 min.
Director - B. Suresha

Synopsis

Set against the coastal backdrop of North Karnataka, DEVARA NAADALLI is the classic reflection of a society's reaction to times of adversity. A crude bomb explodes in a small town college on the very day the local MLA & Industries Minister is scheduled for a visit. Though the explosion itself does little physical harm, it succeeds in unravelling tales of aspersions cast by different sections of the society, showing how truth can remain in complete contradiction to the indictment. Mounting political pressure, communal disharmony, and a young love story all come together in this feature film with multiple time lines.

Synopsis

Sajjad Khan belongs to a Muslim family, whose livelihood is making clay dolls. They have recently migrated to a small village near Shravanabelagola. On the occasion of the Ganesha Festival, Sajjan wants to join his Hindu school friends in the celebrations, but they are apprehensive about taking him along, and avoid him. Only one friend encourages Sajjad to make his own Ganesha idol, since doll making comes naturally to him. The film portrays the purity of a child's communal sentiments, and his understanding of GOD. It remains to be seen whether Sajjad is successful in making the Ganesha idol, and whether his family accepts his choice.

Director - Dinesh Baboo

Synopsis

A man is found brutally murdered in Bangalore, but the police finds no evidence pointing to a killer. Ashwath Rayappa walks into the police station one day and confesses to the murder, claiming he is in love with Siddharth's wife, Priyanka. As the police is questioning him, they receive evidence that places Priyanka under suspicion too. She is called in and told of Ashwath's confession. When the case is presented in court, Priyanka makes the startling revelation that Ashwath was with her in Mysore, so he could not have committed the murder. Unable to prove the case against Ashwath, the prosecution sets him free. Now, finally, Priyanka can get her vengeance.

Synopsis

Mohan, a former first-class cricketer, has prematurely ended his sports career because of an injury and become a Kannada language school teacher. He is also looking forward to marrying his girlfriend, Nikhila, but when he meets her mother for the first time and she learns of Mohan's orthodox family background, it creates quite a bit of friction between the couple. Meanwhile, Mohan finds the young kids from the hostel where he stays fighting with another bunch of kids over a Cricket playground. Ever the pacifist, he suggest they play a game to claim the ground instead of beating each other up. What comes of the Cricket match, and what becomes of Nikhila and Mohan, is the story of PUTA TIRUGISI NODI.

Based on a true story, the narrative revolves around a little girl growing up in poverty with her father in a rural area. When he's unable to manage caring for her himself, he sends Chini to her uncle in a nearby town, where life-changing events occur. Blending past and present with forceful drama, the film tackles crucial, taboo topics, and traces the recurring question of responsibility – or silence.

Synopsis

Born and brought up in a tribal region of Odisha, 'Padmashree' Tulasi Munda did not allow the poverty, illiteracy and un-development of her locality to dishearten her, discourage her or dampen her spirit. She took a humble step to educate her fellow beings, which grew into a huge movement. Be it urban-rural divide or conflict of mines-owner and workers or exploitation of the have-nots by the haves, Tulasi Munda protested each and every act of injustice and discrimination and turned the tide in favour of her fellow beings. The film encapsulates the essence of Tulasi Munda's life. It enumerates her struggle and highlights her achievements.

X: PAST IS PRESENT

Synopsis

A filmmaker named K (Rajat Kapoor) meets a girl half his age at a film festival party. Through the course of the night she reminds him of all the women in his life, from lovers to wives to actresses. Who is she? Is she real or imaginary? A stalker or a ghost? His past catching up or a character from the script he is writing? A bold and original take on relationships, X: PAST IS PRESENT is a one-of-its-kind feature where 11 Indian filmmakers with strikingly different cinematic styles have come together to make different parts of the same film.

Synopsis

Yoo-jeong is a golf driving range manager in her twenties. One day she hears that her only family and sibling Sang-ho has deserted the army. She heads to Jeju the next day and is relieved to hear Sang-ho has been captured but he could be sent to prison. Yoo-jeong wants to see him before he's gone so she finds the place where he first runs away from the military. At the Olle Route in Jeju Yoo-jeong runs into many obstacles but she tries to complete the route anyway despite it being her first adventure. She starts on the wrong foot with Ji-ho, a high school student who happens to be on the same path as her. They rescue a girl named Erica who was being chased by someone and get involved in some unexpected happenings. However, they find out Erica has been fooling them and she's actually Korean. Yoo-jeong tries to turn back to meet Sang-ho but she can't leave behind Erica who is in trouble and decides to embark the journey with her. Meanwhile, Soon-seon who is after Erica, is close to finding her. On the verge of danger, Erica opens her mouth to reveal truths that shock everyone and once they make it out of danger Yoo-jeong, Ji-ho and Erica pour their hearts out to each other near the sea. Then they go different ways, cherishing the Olle Route in their hearts. Yoo-jeong finally meets her brother Sang-ho but learns that he's going through a hard time because of her.

Synopsis

Kate is a former head teacher with a natural authority and severity; she is still widely liked and respected in the local community. Her husband is very different: Geoff was a manager at a local engineering business who came up from the shop floor ranks, an ex-union man who loathes the way this country went in the 1980. There is just one week until their 45th wedding anniversary and the planning for the party is going well. But then a letter from the Swiss authorities arrives for Geoff with shattering news that changes Kate's perspective on their marriage forever. By the time the party is upon them, five days later, there may not be a marriage left to celebrate.

Synopsis

In this timely thriller, charismatic and ruthless businessman, Rick Carver is making a killing by repossessing homes - gaming the real estate market, Wall Street banks and the US government. When he evicts Dennis Nash, a single father trying to care for his mother and young son, Nash becomes so desperate to provide for his family that he goes to work for Carver – the very man who evicted him in the first place. Carver promises Nash a way to regain his home and earn security for his family, but slyly seduces him into a lifestyle of wealth and glamour. As Nash falls deeper into Carver's web, he finds his situation grows more brutal and dangerous than he ever imagined.

Synopsis

Öllers and Niederländer are two highly paid consultants. For years they've been touring the world's dirtiest countries seeking to satisfy their clients' hunger for profit. Their goal seems to be within their grasp: to ascend to their company's top echelon and finally be made partners. Both are aware that, according to their firm's unwritten rules in the hierarchy, they'll need to secure their final promotion by their mid-thirties or else they'll be sidelined. But then their old rival Hellinger is given the sought-after promotion and they find themselves forced to come to terms with his successor, the ambitious young Bianca.

Synopsis

Yitzhak runs the turkey farm his father built with his own two hands after they emigrated from Iran to Israel. When his son Moti turns thirteen, Yitzhak teaches him the trade, hoping that he will continue the proud family tradition. But Moti doesn't like working in the turkey barn; his passion is fixing up junkyard cars and bringing them back to life. Yitzhak takes Moti's refusal to work in the turkey barn as a personal rejection. Though he loves his son dearly, he makes it his mission to impose the family farm on Moti. The arrival of Darius, the uncle from America, sets off a chain of events that will undermine the familial harmony. Soon enough Yitzhak will learn that his son is just as stubborn as he is. Synopsis

The movie revolves around the suppressed desires of a group of young men and women in Ho Chi Minh City in the 1990s. While an amateur photographer longs for his hunky roommate, an aspiring ballerina copes with her double life as a sexy nightclub dancer. This sumptuous film captures the hopes and hopelessness of a generation of young Vietnamese.

Synopsis

A young woman in her 20s, Therese Belivet, works as a clerk in a Manhattan department store and dreams of a more fulfilling life when she meets Carol, an alluring woman trapped in a loveless, convenient marriage. As an immediate connection sparks between them, the innocence of their first encounter dims and their connection deepens. While Carol breaks free from the confines of marriage, her husband threatens her competence as a mother when Carol's involvement with Therese and close relationship with her best friend Abby comes to light. As Carol leaves the comfort of home to travel with Therese, an internal journey of self-discovery coincides with her new sense of space.

Synopsis

The story is set in 1979 in South Africa, when a pass system was in place restricting the movement of non-whites. In the Orange Free State, Indians were not allowed to reside or own land or do business, in fact they needed permission to be in the province. Jeanette is a beautiful open minded law student. During her summer holiday with her father in the Free State, a random act of kindness by an attractive Indian man, Ravi, sparks an unexpected love affair. Secret meetings followed but when they are found out, all hell breaks loose.

Synopsis

A little girl walks into a court room, looks the judge straight in the eye and tells him: "I want a divorce." In Yemen, where there is no age requirement for marriage, ten-year-old Nojoom is forced to marry a 30-year-old man. The dowry offers the family a small income and one less mouth to feed. A legitimate and acceptable arrangement for all, except for Nojoom who will soon see her life take a turn for the worse. A beautiful plea for all the girls forced into womanhood too soon and for their right to a life on their own terms.

ಜ್ಯಾಕ್ JACK

Synopsis

Although he is only ten years old, Jack is responsible for himself and his little brother Manuel and this fills him with pride. Their single mother works during the day and often goes out at night. There's no father in sight. One day, Manuel burns himself with boiling hot water while bathing and Jack is blamed for the incident. It's reason enough for social services to put him in a home where he is dreadfully homesick. He soon gets into trouble and bolts, heading for home. He arrives back, only to find his mother is once again absent. Jack and Manuel roam the city in search of her. They sleep in parks and in an underground car park, run away from the police and encounter adults, some of whom help and others who are indifferent.

ಮೀನಾ ವಾಕಿಂಗ್ MINA WALKING

Synopsis

12 year-old Mina cooks, sews, washes and works selling knick-knacks on the war-torn streets of Kabul to feed her Alzheimer stricken grandfather and heroin addicted father, who forbids her to attend school. But Mina is impulsive, and witnessing the country's nascent emancipation inspires her to neglect her father's orders and secretly attend classes in her local school. Over the course of the seven days that lead up to Afghanistan's first democratic transfer of power, Mina's decision to secretly educate herself instead of looking after her senile grandfather sets in motion a chain of events that change her life forever.

Synopsis

Marrakech today. Noha, Randa, Soukaina, Hlima and others live a life of 'love for sale'. They're whores, objects of desire. Flashes of flesh. Bodies exposing themselves, getting worked up. Money flowing to the rhythms of pleasure and humiliations suffered. But full of joy and a sense of complicity, dignified and free in their kingdom of women, they overcome the violence of the Moroccan society that takes advantage of them while at the same time condemning them.

Synopsis

Three sisters live together in their late grandmother's house in the city of Kamaruka. They have lived together since their dad left home for another woman. They have lived together since their mother imitated her husband by running off with another man. Sachi, 29, the oldest, is a nurse at the local hospital; she acts as a substitute mother to Yoshino, 22, and Chika, 19. One day, the threesome learns of the death of their "traitor" father and halfheartedly go to his funeral. In Yamagata, something unexpected happens: they meet their half-sister Suzu, 13, and immediately fall for the spell of the exquisite young creature. Sensing that Yoko, her father's widow, will not be a fit guardian, Sachi invites Suzu to move to the Kamakura home.

Synopsis

Rural Poland, 1943. Four young people: Bunia, a Jewish girl who escaped from a train to the death camps; Guido, a German officer; and two Poles - Romen and Franka, are brought together by a series of extraordinary events. They find something that can be both an escape and a source of danger during wartime - love.

Synopsis

THE ASSASSIN is set in 8th century China during the Tang Dynasty and centers on Nie Yinniàng (played by Shu Qi), a killer appointed to slay corrupt government officials by her master, Jiaxin, a nun who raised her from the age of ten. When Yinniàng displays mercy by failing to kill during her duties, Jiaxin punishes her with a ruthless assignment designed to test Yinniàng's resolve. She is sent to the distant province/circuit of Weibo in northern China to kill its military governor Tian Ji'an — the cousin she had once been betrothed to.

Synopsis

THE SECOND MOTHER centres on Val, a hard-working live-in housekeeper in modern day Sao Paulo. Val is perfectly content to take care of every one of her wealthy employers' needs, from cooking and cleaning to being a surrogate mother to their teenage son, who she has raised since he was a toddler. But when Val's estranged daughter Jessica suddenly shows up the unspoken but intrinsic class barriers that exist within the home are thrown into disarray. Jessica is smart, confident, and ambitious, and refuses to accept the upstairs/downstairs dynamic, testing relationships and loyalties and forcing everyone to reconsider what family really means.

Iranian Cinema dates back to around 1930. Although the film industry took some time to establish itself in the early period by the 1960s cinematography and production values had reached high professional standards. The first Persian filmmaker was Mirza Ebrahim Khan Akkas Bashi, the official photographer of Muzaffar al-Din Shah, the Shah of Persia from 1896-1907. After a visit to Paris in July 1900, Akkas Bashi obtained a camera and filmed the Shah's visit to Europe upon the Shah's orders. He is said to have filmed the Shah's private and religious ceremonies, but no copies of such films exist today. A few years after Akkas Bashi started photography, Khan Baba Motazedi, another pioneer in Iranian motion picture photography emerged. He shot a considerable amount of newsreel footage during the reign of Qajar to the Pahlavi dynasty. In 1904, Mirza Ebrahim Khan Sahhafbashi opened the first movie theater in Tehran. After Mirza Ebrahim Khan, several others like Russi Khan, Ardeshir Khan, and Ali Vakilitried to establish new movie theaters in Tehran. Until the early 1930s, there were little more than 15 theatres in Tehran and 11 in other provinces. In 1925, Ovanes Ohanian, decided to establish the first film school in Iran. Within five years he managed to run the first session of the school under the name Parvareshgahe Artistiye cinema (The Cinema Artist Educational Centre). Early Persian directors, those like Abdolhossein Sepanta and Esmail Koushan, took advantage of the richness of Persian literature and ancient Persian mythology. In their work, they emphasized ethics and humanity rather than ideology.

The 1960s was an extremely significant decade for Iranian cinema, with 25 commercial films produced annually on average throughout the early '60s, increasing to 65 by the end of the decade. The majority of production focused on melodrama and thrillers. The movie that really boosted the economy of Iranian cinema and initiated a new genre was Ganj-e-Qarun (Coesus Treasure), made in 1965 by Siamak Yasami. Four years later Masoud Kimiay made Kaiser. With Kaiser (Qeysar), Kimiay depicted the ethics and morals of the romanticized poor working class of the Ganj-e-Qarun genre through his main protagonist, the titular 'Qeysar'.

In the early 1970s, a New Iranian Cinema emerged (cinema motefävet). However, following the Revolution in 1979, a few filmmakers went into exile. Between 1979 and 1985, about 100 features were released. In 1982, the annual Fajr Film Festival financed films and The Farabi Cinema Foundation also stepped in. The following year, the government began to provide financial aid for filmmaking. This change in regime encouraged a whole new generation of filmmakers, which included female directors as well. With this, the focus shifted to children overcoming obstacles: true stories, lyrical, mystical drama, real-life problems, documentary footage, etc. Post-revolutionary Iranian cinema has been celebrated in many international forums and festivals for its distinct style, themes, authors, idea of nationhood, and cultural references. Starting with Viva...! (1980) by Khosrow Sinai and followed by many excellent directors who emerged in the last few decades, such as Abbas Kiarostami and Jafar Panahi. Kiarostami, who some critics regard as one of the greatest directors in the history of cinema, planted Iran firmly on the map of world cinema when he won the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival for Taste of Cherry in 1997. Other masters to have won international recognition are Mohsen Makmalbaf, Asghar Farhadi and Majid Majidi. Along with China, Iran has been lauded as one of the best filmmaking nations of the world - from the 1990s onwards. Some critics now rank Iran as the world's most important national cinema artistically, inviting comparison to Italian neo-realism and similar movements in the history of cinema.

Synopsis

Arabani is a slang word that combines Hebrew and Arabic. Yoseph is a Druze who returns to his native village after having been away for 17 years. He arrives with his son and daughter, whose Jewish mother he has just divorced, with plans to settle down in the small Druze village. That decision leads to friction within the conservative Druze community, and with his mother Afifa, who accepts him and his children as part of her family. The friction stems from the fact that to be a real Druze both parents must be Druze. Despite the problems and difficulties, Semadar, Yoseph's daughter, unexpectedly finds love.

The leading producer of feature films in Latin America, Mexico, was rather slow in the initial development of its national film industry. As early as 1897, an engineering student named Salvador Toscano Barragan had begun recording big and small events in the life of his country, footage later edited by his daughter in the 50s into a valuable documentary called The Memoirs of a Mexican. The first feature film of importance The Gray Automobile (1919), about the exploits of a criminal gang and directed by Enrique Rosas and Joachim Coss. The key directors in this early period were those like Miguel Contreras Torres and Manuel Ojeda. In 1931 the great Soviet director Sergei Eisenstein visited Mexico to film Que Viva Mexico and this inspired other outsiders like Fred Zinneman and Paul Strand who collaborated on Redes/ The Wave (1935). These film-makers and indigenous talents like Emilio Fernandez put Mexico on the international map in the 1940s with such films as Passion Island (1941), Maria Candelaria (1942) The Pearl and Enamorada (both 1946). By the early 1950s Mexican film production reached a peak of 150 films annually, many of which gained wide distribution outside Mexico. The next major boost received by Mexico may have been by the arrival of Spanish surrealist Luis Bunuel, who made a series of important films there between 1946 and 1960. Among Bunuel's Mexican classics are films like Los Olvidados (1950) and Nazarin (1959).

The 1961 film The Important Man (original title Animas Trujano) was nominated for the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film and a Golden Globe Award for Best Foreign Language Film in 1962. The 1965 film Always Further On won the FIPRESCI Prize at the 1965 Cannes Film Festival. The film was also selected as the Mexican entry for the Best Foreign Language Film at the 38th Academy Awards, but was not accepted as a nominee.[13] Some films nominated for the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Films of the time are the 1960 Macario, 1962 The Pearl of Tlayucan original title (Tlayucan), 1975 Letters from Marusia original title (Actas de Marusia). But regardless of the headway made by Mexican cinema the country's film industry came under enormous pressure from American imports and television and it fell into a decline in the mid-1960s. Producers therefore started investing in exploitation films and low-budget melodramas. This state of affairs continued until the 1970s and the Mexican Academy Awards were discontinued until 1971. The only consolation was the presence of a handful of independent directors like Jaime Humberto Hermosilo, Arturo Ripstein, Felipe Cazals and Alberto Isaac.

The period spanning the 1990s to the present has been considered as the Era of the Nuevo Cine Mexicano (New Mexican Cinema). It first took place with high quality films by Arturo Ripstein, Alfonso Arau, Alfonso Cuarón and María Novaro. Among the films produced at this time were Solo Con Tu Pareja (1991), Como Agua Para Chocolate (Like Water for Chocolate) (1992), Cronos (1992), El Callejón De Los Milagros (1995), Profundo Carmesí (1996), Sexo, Pudor Y Lágrimas (Sex, Shame, and Tears) (1999), The Other Conquest (2000), and others like La Misma Luna (2006). The more recent sensations are Amores Perros by Alejandro González Iñárritu, Y Tu Mamá También by Alfonso Cuarón, El Crimen Del Padre Amaro by Carlos Carrera, Arráncame La Vida by Roberto Sneider, Biutiful (2010), Hidalgo: La Historia Jamás Contada (2010), Instructions Not Included (2013), Cantiflas (2014), and the 1975 remake of the original Mexican horror film Más Negro Que La Noche (Blacker Than Night) (2014), also the first 3D film of Mexico.

In terms of film production, Turkey shared the same fate with many of the national cinemas of the 20th century. Film production wasn't continuous until around the 1950s and the film market in general was run by a few major import companies that struggled for domination in the most population-dense and profitable cities such as Istanbul and Izmir. Film theatres rarely ever screened any locally produced films and the majority of the programs consisted of films of the stronger western film industries, especially those of the United States, France, Italy and Germany. Attempts at film production came primarily from multinational studios, which could rely on their comprehensive distribution networks together with their own theatre chains, thus guaranteeing them a return on their investment. Between the years 1896-1945, the number of locally produced films did not even reach 50 films in total, equal to less than a single year's annual film production in the 1950s and 1960s. Domestically produced films constituted only a small fraction of the total number of films screened in Turkey prior to the 1950s. The first Turkish movie, Ayastefanos'taki Rus Abidesinin Yıkılması, a documentary produced by Fuat Uzkınay in 1914, depicted the destruction of a Russian monument erected at the end of the 1877-1878 Russo-Turkish War in Yeşilköy following Turkey's entry into World War I. The first thematic Turkish films were The Marriage of Himmet Aga (1916-1918), started by Weinberg and completed by Uzkınay, and The Paw (1917) and The Spy (1917), both by Sedat Simavi. The army-affiliated Central Cinema Directorate, a semi-military national defence society, and the Disabled Veterans Society were the producing organizations of that period. Yeşilçam ('Green Pine') is a metonym for the Turkish film industry, similar to Hollywood in the United States. Yeşilçam is named after Yeşilçam Street in the Beyoğlu district of Istanbul where many actors, directors, crew members and studios were based. Yeşilçam experienced its heyday from the 1950s to the 1970s, when it produced 250 to 350 films annually. After the 1970s, Yeşilçam suffered due to the spread of television in Turkey. However, Yeşilçam has seen a revival since 2002, having produced critically acclaimed movies such as Uzak and Babam ve Oğlum (My Father and My Son). Between 1950 and 1966 more than fifty movie directors worked in Turkey. Ömer Lütfi Akad strongly influenced the period, but Osman Fahir Seden, Atıf Yılmaz, and Memduh Ün made the most films. The film Susuz Yaz (Dry Summer), made by Metin Erksan, won the Golden Bear Award at the Berlin Film Festival in 1964. In 1970, approximately 220 films were made and this figure reached 300 in 1972. Turkish cinema gave birth to its legendary stars during this period, notable examples being Kemal Sunal, Kadir Vanlı, Türkan Erbuğ and Zeynep Tuğcu. After this period, however, the cinema began to lose its audiences, due to nationwide TV broadcasts. After 1970, a new and younger generation of directors emerged, but they had to cope with an increased demand for video films after 1980.

Increased production costs and difficulties in the import of raw materials brought about a decrease in the number of films made in the 1970s, but the quality of films improved. However, the resurgence of Yeşilçam didn't truly take place until the release of Vizontele in 2001. The film was directed, written, and starred by Yılmaz Erdoğan, who was already well-known from his long-running sitcom Bir Demet Tiyatro and his dedication to theatre. The movie starred the cast of his usual plays, most notably Demet Akbaş, Altan Erkekli, and Cem Yılmaz. This movie's huge commercial success (watched by 2.5 million viewers, which made the movie the most viewed film for its day) brought attention to the industry. Since then, larger-budgeted films have been produced, including notable examples such as Kurtlar Vadisi: Irak (Valley of the Wolves: Iraq), which was viewed by a record 4 million people, Babam ve Oğlum (My Father and My Son), and Cem Yılmaz's second movie Hokkabaz (The Magician). There has been a rise in experimental films in the 2000s. These include the 2005 feature Türev, which was filmed without a prewritten script and even featured candid shots of the actors, and Anlat İstanbul (Istanbul Tales), an ensemble piece divided into five 'mini films' that received a strong reception. Internationally, the best known Turkish filmmakers have been Yılmaz Güney, a Kurd who was accused of harbouring anarchist students and arrested, spending large periods in jail after 1960, and Nuri Bilge Ceylan, a cinematographer-turned-director. Güney won the Palme d'Or at the 1982 Cannes Film Festival for his film Yol, and Ceylan won the same prize in 2014 for Winter Sleep. ”

Synopsis

A young teacher, Ali, lives with his aging mother, Nigar, in Istanbul's Tarlabasi district. When the ongoing gentrification of the old city forces them to move for a second time, they end up in the soulless concrete desert of the city's furthest outskirts. Every morning she packs her belongings and sets out to return to her village. She roams the city, in search of her village and in search of the song that keeps returning in her dreams.

NETPAC

NETWORK FOR THE PROMOTION OF ASIAN CINEMA, NETPAC, In the twenty years since it was founded, has become established as the leading platform for the discovery and promotion of Asian cinema. It took under its wing a quarterly publication, Cinemaya, which provided a forum for mostly Asian critics, writers and scholars to document and evaluate Asian films and subsequently add them to the Asian cinema canon.

The NETPAC Award

NETPAC's another major contribution is the institution of the NETPAC Award at international film festivals: as more Asian films were selected for exhibition for world audiences, a yardstick for quality was necessary that matched the competitive spirit fuelling the creative urges of young Asian filmmakers. The NETPAC Award is now given at more than 28 international film festivals in 21 countries and 5 continents including major film festivals at Berlin, Kerala, Karlovy Vary, Locarno, Pusan, Rotterdam etc. Biffes hosts a NETPAC Jury for the third consecutive time. This time however there is an additional NETPAC Jury for Kannada Cinema also. The Award Carries a Certificate, Plaque and a modest Cash Prize.

The FIPRESCI Award Winners - programme:

FIPRESCI, the International Federation of Film Critics, has been in existence for more than 70 years. The basic purpose of the organization, which now has members in more than 60 countries all over the world, is to support cinema as art form and as an outstanding and autonomous means of expression. This is done for cultural, and not for political reasons, interest is focused only on cinema itself and its artistic development.

FIPRESCI International took the initiative in 1946 to institute FIPRESCI jury, at Cannes Film Festival, consisting of International film critics who awarded the prize to David Lean's BRIEF ENCOUNTER and Geroges Rouquier's FARREBIQUE.

Since then thanks to the prestige of the FIPRESCI Award the number of FIPRESCI juries has constantly grown over the last six decades, and today it is represented in 60 International Film Festivals.

Here in this festival we feel proud to present a package of selected films around the world which have won FIPRESCI AWARDS at different International Film Festivals in recent years.

Synopsis

Corn Island is a psychological drama. The action in the film takes place at the natural border of the Georgian-Abkhazian conflict – the Enguri River. The spring floods create a small island in the middle of the river, where an old peasant grows corn. Later a Georgian border policeman comes to the island and changes the seemingly ideal life of the old peasant and his 16-year old grand daughter.

“ If there were any Indian films highly regarded enough around the world to demand restoration, the list would begin with Ray's Apu Trilogy. To most film enthusiasts around the world, Satyajit Ray is Indian cinema. This makes Satyajit Ray such a 'big' subject in India that it is not an exaggeration to say that, if Indian cinema were to be categorised historically and put into two distinct compartments, one of the compartments could belong exclusively to him. This is not to say that his films reveal the 'truest' India - or even that they are incontrovertibly the 'best' films ever made in this country. It is simply that Ray learned and rigorously applied certain accepted principles of filmmaking to narrative which, till that time, seemed to resist these principles, these modes of cinematic storytelling and, for a while at least, Indian cinema was perhaps integrated with world cinema through his films. The Apu Trilogy comprises three films dealing with the character Apu (created by Bibuti Bhushan Bandopadhyay) with the first being Pather Panchali (1954).

Produced on a shoestring budget (Pather Panchali had a budget of roughly Rs. 150,000) using an amateur cast and crew, the trilogy is a milestone in Indian cinema and remains one of the finest examples of the art film movement. The three films went on to win many national and international awards, including three National Film Awards and seven awards from the Cannes, Berlin and Venice Film Festivals. They are today frequently listed among the greatest films of all time and are often cited as the greatest movies in the history of Indian cinema.

Pather Panchali (Bengali, 'Song of the Little Road') the first film of the trilogy deals with Apu's early experiences in rural Bengal as the son of a poor but high caste family are presented. Apu's father Harihar, a Brahmin, has difficulty in supporting his family. After the death of Apu's sister, Durga, the family moves to the holy city of Benares. In the second film of 1957 Aparajito (Bengali, 'The Unvanquished') the family's finances are still precarious. After his father dies there, Apu and his mother Sarbajaya come back to a village in Bengal. Despite unrelenting poverty, Apu manages to get formal schooling and turns out to be a brilliant student. The growing Apu comes into conflict with his mother. Later, when his mother dies too, he has to learn to live alone. Ray made Aparajito immediately after Pather Panchali but the third film in the trilogy Apur Sansar (Bengali, 'The World of Apu') came three films later. Attempting to become a writer, Apu accidentally finds himself pressurized to marry a girl whose bridegroom is found to be mentally ill on the day of their wedding. Their blossoming marriage ends in her death in childbirth, after which the despairing Apu abandons his child, but eventually returns to accept his responsibilities, establishing bonds with his son.

This trilogy is considered by critics around the globe to rank among the greatest achievements of film, and it is established as one of the most historically important cinematic debuts. Andrew Robinson, in his book Satyajit Ray: The Inner Eye comments that the three films differ in their predominant moods and taken together the trilogy is compared to the development of an Indian classical Raga ”

ABOUT THE DIRECTOR

Satyajit Ray is widely regarded as one of the greatest filmmakers of the 20th century. He directed 36 films and was also a fiction writer, publisher, illustrator, calligrapher, music composer, graphic designer and film critic. He authored several short stories and novels, primarily aimed at children and adolescents. He was awarded an honorary degree by Oxford University. Ray's first film, Pather Panchali (1955), won eleven international prizes, including the Best Human Document at the 1956 Cannes Film Festival. This film, along with Aparajito (1956), and Apur Sansar (1959) form The Apu Trilogy. Ray did the scripting, casting, scoring, and editing, and designed his own credit titles and publicity material. Ray received many major awards in his career, including 32 Indian National Film Awards, a number of awards at international film festivals and award ceremonies, and an Academy Honorary Award in 1992. The Government of India honored him with the Bharat Ratna in 1992.

A biographical film or biopic is a film that dramatizes the life of a non-fictional or historically-based person, or people. Such films show the life of a historical person. Usually, the central character's real name is used. They differ from films "based on a true story" or "historical drama films" in that they attempt to comprehensively tell a person's life story or at least the most historically important years of their lives. Because the figures portrayed are actual people, whose actions and characteristics are known to the public (or at least historically documented), biopic roles are considered some of the most demanding of actors and actresses. Ben Kingsley, Johnny Depp, Jim Carrey and Jamie Foxx all gained new-found respect as dramatic actors after starring in biopics. Ben Kingsley as Mahatma Gandhi in Gandhi (1982), Depp as Ed Wood in Ed Wood (1994), Carrey as Andy Kaufman in Man on the Moon (1999), and Foxx as Ray Charles in Ray (2004). Film personalities - film-makers like Ed Wood and Orson Welles have also been the subjects of popular biopics. Artists have also been the subject of biopics - those like Michelangelo, Van Gogh, Picasso and Gauguin - as well as musicians - from Beethoven to Tansen although paucity of recorded information could have made the film about Tansen inauthentic.

In India there have been a plethora of biopics on celebrities from all walks of life except probably the film industry itself. However, now it seems the industry is ready to look within and a few biopics have also been proposed on veterans from showbiz. Films on the lives of actors Meena Kumari and singers Kishore Kumar and Bhupen Hazarika are on the anvil. Speaking about why making films on industry insiders isn't easy, filmmaker Milan Luthria who made The Dirty Picture, inspired by the life of actor Silk Smitha says, "Making these films is like looking into the mirror. After all, we are made up of the same DNA, have the same fears, same highs and lows. The Dirty Picture was very emotionally draining for me. Also, I feel that people from the film industry want to guard their lives." Trade analyst Komal Nahta says that biopics on people from showbiz aren't made because the audience doesn't relate to their starry lives: "I don't think they relate to them. But I feel if one such film works, more will be made. Producers are scared at the moment."

Filmmaker Onir feels the legalities involved in a biopic on film personalities are also a major hurdle for makers. "Films on sports personalities are inspirational and work in the commercial space. Films on people from showbiz generally turn tragic. Also, there are many permissions needed as there may be sensitive areas in an actor's life, and many people are usually involved," he says. Filmmaker Anurag Basu is reportedly planning a biopic on the legendary singer-actor Kishore Kumar. The director has roped in actor Ranbir Kapoor to play Kumar. Late filmmaker Kamaal Amrohi's son Tajdar Amrohi has decided to make a biopic on the life of actor Meena Kumari, who was also his father's second wife, under his father's banner. There were reports of actor Manisha Koirala being approached for the project. However, Amrohi has clarified that they have not approached anyone for the role yet. And neither have they finalised any actor for his father's role. ”

Synopsis

JIA ZHANG-KE, A GUY FROM FENYANG is the portrait of a young Chinese director, who for many has become one of the most important filmmakers of our time. The documentary, directed by Walter Salles, dwells on the question of memory and cinema, as it follows Jia Zhang-ke to his birthplace, the Shanxi province in Northern China, and the locations of his films. With the help of his actors and collaborators, Jia Zhang-ke retraces the inspirational sources behind his films and, in doing so, unveils the reflection of a culture in convulsion.

Synopsis

Kolumban, a cowherd boy, has been living with the aged Chekkutty and his cattle in a hut on a hilltop, which is under threat of forced eviction. The 'mountaineering game' annually played during winter traps Kolumban in inescapable servitude and slave-master bondage. Akku, the boy who has become the king in the game, has the right to penalize and discipline Kolumban. The king's punishments are often very harsh and barbaric, but playing with other children and engaging in merry-making on the meadows are a relief from the extreme alienation that Kolumban usually feels. The unexpected arrival of Manavan reorients Kolumban's conceptions of life and education.

Synopsis

When a dance troupe from Bengaluru arrives to perform at a village, the local boys, jealous of the city kids, plan to spoil the performance. As they watch the final dress rehearsal with admiration, they decide to be friendly and helpful instead. In their time off, they take the city boys to a river on the other side of the village, not realizing that a nearby chemical factory is contaminating the water. Since the local leaders favor the factory owner, the local boys, along with a retired army professional, bring the matter to the Government's attention, thereby demonstrating the importance of conserving natural resources.

Chauthi Koot

Synopsis

CHAUTHI KOOT evokes the atmosphere of suspicion, fear and paranoia of the Punjab in 1984. It considers two loosely connected incidents: two Hindu friends trying to get to Amritsar and, five months earlier, a farmer who is told he has to kill the family dog. One story flows into the other and back, and like a relay race, the baton passes from one character to another. What binds the two is the condition of the common man trapped between the excesses of the military on one side and the militant movement for a separate Sikh nation on the other.

ABOUT THE DIRECTOR

Rangaswamy has 25 years of experience working as a scriptwriter and an associate director. Kanathare Kambule Theditari (The Missing Well) is his debut film.

István Szabó (born February 18, 1938) is a Hungarian film director, screenwriter, and opera director. Szabó is one of the most internationally famous Hungarian filmmakers since the late 1960s. Working in the tradition of European auteurism, he has made films that represent many of the political and psychological conflicts of Central Europe's recent history, as well as of his own personal history. He made his first short film in 1959 as a student at the Hungarian Academy of Theatrical and Cinematic Arts, and his first feature film in 1964. He achieved his greatest international success with Mephisto (1981), which won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film. Since then, most of Szabó's films have been international co-productions filmed in a variety of languages and European locations. He has continued to make some films in Hungarian, however, and even in his international co-productions, he often films in Hungary and uses Hungarian talent. Born in Budapest, Szabó is the son of Mária (née Vita) and István Szabó, the latter of whom was a doctor from a long line of doctors. Szabó came from a family of Jews who had converted to Catholicism, but, considered Jews by the Arrow Cross Party (Hungarian Nazis), they were forced to separate and hide in Budapest sometime between October 1944, when Nazi Germany occupied Hungary and installed the Arrow Cross in power, and February 1945, when the Soviets defeated the German Army in Budapest. Szabó survived by hiding at an orphanage, but his father died of diphtheria shortly after the German defeat. Memories of these events would later appear in several of his films.

Szabó's first feature film, The Age of Illusions (1964), is a partly autobiographical film about the struggles of Szabó's generation in starting a career, encountering the obsolescence of the older generation, and establishing romantic relationships. The film won the Silver Sail for Best First Work at the Locarno International Film Festival and a Special Jury Prize for Best Director at the Hungarian Film Festival. Father (1966) is a coming of age story that displays Szabó's increasing fascination with history and memory. Lovefilm (1970) focuses on a young man's relationship with his childhood sweetheart, told through flashbacks and rendered in an experimental, fragmented form. This experimental tendency in Szabó's films reached its apotheosis in 25 Fireman Street (1973), which began as a short film, Dream about a House (1971). Szabó's three films between 1981 and 1988 constituted a new phase in his career—moving away from Hungarian productions, in Hungarian, written by Szabó alone, and featuring Bálint, and moving toward international co-productions, in German, written by Szabó in collaboration with others, and featuring Austrian actor Klaus Maria Brandauer. The informal trilogy—Mephisto (1981), Colonel Redl (1985) and Hanussen (1988)—features Brandauer in a series of roles based on historical figures who, as represented in the films, compromised their morals in order to climb the ladder of success within a context of authoritarian political power. In Mephisto, based on a novel by Klaus Mann, Brandauer plays an actor and theater director in Nazi Germany, a role based on Mann's former brother-in-law Gustaf Gründgens. The film won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film, and the award for Best Screenplay at the Cannes Film Festival, and greatly increased István Szabó's international prestige.

Several interconnected themes run through Szabó's films, the most common being the relationship between the personal and the political or historical. On the personal level, his first three feature films deal with coming of age issues, but political/historical events form the backdrop of these issues and continually rupture the attempts of the characters to lead their private lives. A related theme is the moral compromises individuals must make in order to succeed in immoral political systems. In an interview about Taking Sides (2001), Szabó said, "I don't think that life is possible without making compromises. The question is only one of limits: how far to go. When one crosses the line, then the compromise starts to be a bad, even deadly, one." In 2005, Szabó was awarded the Lifetime Achievement Award at the 27th Moscow International Film Festival.

Nils Malmros (born 1944), a Danish film director and screenwriter, is considered a leading auteur of realism in Danish cinema. Malmros is noted for his detailed focus on the common growing pains of adolescence and the loss of innocence, which he draws from his childhood experiences growing up in Århus, Denmark. His most notable films form a trilogy about schoolchildren in 1950s Århus: Lars-Ole 5c, Boys and Tree of Knowledge. The latter film, 1981's Tree of Knowledge (Kundskabenstræ), is one of ten films listed in Denmark's cultural canon by the Danish Ministry of Culture.

Malmros, self-educated as a filmmaker, is formally trained as a surgeon. In his film Facing the Truth (At kendesandheden), he performed all of the film's brain surgery sequences himself. Malmros is a 4-time recipient of the Bodil Award for Best Danish Film and a 3-time recipient of the Robert Award for Danish Film of the Year. In 1968, using his own money and his friends as actors, Malmros wrote and directed his first film: A Strange Romance (Enmærkeligkærlighed). The film about the problems and philosophical discussions of some youths in Århus received a premiere at a Copenhagen theatre but passed with little notice. After opening in Århus, critics panned the movie for being amateurish and a plagiarism of Truffaut. Malmros was hurt, but pushed forward with his next movie project: Lars-Ole, 5c. Malmros again self-funded his project. The movie revolved around the social life and development of a fifth-grade schoolboy. Malmros filmed on location at the FinsensgadesSkole in Århus where he once attended, and he reduced costs by using children from the school as actors and extras. In 1971, he appealed for support to transfer the film from 16-mm to 35-mm and was again refused. The film premiered in 1973 to critical praise and was hailed as "a little film miracle." Malmros' treatment by the Danish Film Fund became a scandal and was discussed within the Danish parliament. In August of that year, Malmros won the Bodil Award for Best Danish Film for Lars-Ole, 5c.

The positive results and financial success of his Lars-Ole, 5c permitted Malmros to pursue his first professional film: Boys (Drenge). Once again, Malmros used his own childhood experiences to relate his story. The film premiered in 1977 and in 1978, Malmros won his second Bodil Award for Best Danish Film. In 1981, Malmros released the third film of his trilogy: Tree of Knowledge (Kundskabenstræ). Like Lars-Ole, 5c and Boys, Tree of Knowledge was an examination of Danish schoolchildren in Århus during the 1950s. However, this time, the story revolved around the lives of 17 young teenagers during a two-year period. Shooting on location at the ÅrhusKatedralskole where he went to school, Malmros took two years to film the action, so the cast members reflected the real life physical and emotional development of their characters. Tree of Knowledge is one of the top 100 Danish films listed by the Danish Film Institute and is one of ten films listed in the cultural canon of Denmark by the Danish Ministry of Culture.

In 1992, Malmros shifted from his usual milieu and made the dramatic tragedy Pain of Love (KærlighedensSmerte). Departing from Malmros' usual affectionate view of childhood, the film tells a beautiful but bitter story about a young college student whose small setbacks in school and relationships lead her toward an inexorable descent into suicidal depression. For his next film, Malmros for the first time chose a story from outside of his childhood environs. Barbara (1997) is an adaptation of the classic Danish novel by Jørgen-Frantz Jacobsen set in the Faroe Islands. The film about a minister who falls in love and marries a promiscuous woman received the Audience Award at the Rouen Nordic Film Festival as well as the 1998 Robert Award for Best Film.

TREE OF KNOWLEDGE

Kundskabens Træ

B. Saroja Devi is an Indian actress, who has acted in a host of films in various languages, be it Kannada, Tamil, Telugu or Hindi. One of the most successful female leads in the history of Indian cinema, she acted in around 200 films over 6 decades. She is known by the epithets "KannadathuPaingili" (Kannada Nightingale) and "AbinayaSaraswathi" (Saraswati of acting). At the age of 14, Saroja Devi got her big break in the Kannada film MahakaviKalidasa (1955). In Telugu cinema, she made her debut with PandurangaMahatyam (1959), and starred in a number of successful films until the late 1970s. The Tamil film NadodiMannan (1958) made her one of the top actresses in Tamil cinema. Her career in Tamil films declined after her marriage in 1967, but she continued to be one of the top actresses in Kannada cinema until the 1980s. She also starred in Hindi films until the mid-1960s, starting with Paigham (1959).

Saroja Devi was born in Bangalore, (now Bengaluru) January 1942. Her father Bhairappa worked for the police department. A young Saroja Devi was accompanied often by her father to studios and he would patiently tie on her salangais and massage her swollen feet after her dancing stunts. Saroja Devi's first major success was HonnappaBhagavata's Kannada film MahakaviKalidasa (1955), in which she played a supporting role. The film won the National Film Award for Best Feature Film in Kannada. Next, she acted in B R Panthulu's Tamil film ThangamalaiRagasiyam (1957), in which she performed a dance sequence. Subsequently, she was noted by M. G. Ramachandran (MGR), who cast her as the female lead in NadodiMannan (1958), the movie that made her one of the most popular actresses in Tamil Nadu. She was then signed up for the Hindi film Paigham (1959), in which her co-stars included Dilip Kumar. She went on to work in other leading Hindi actors, including Rajendra Kumar in Sasural (1961), Sunil Dutt in BetiBete (1964), Shammi Kapoor in Preet Na Jane Reet (1966).

Saroja Devi also achieved success in Telugu films, starring opposite N. T. Rama Rao in SeetaramaKalyanam (1961) and JagadekaVeeruni Katha (1961), and DaaguduMoothalu (1964). Amara Shilpijakkanna (1964, remake of Kannada film) and Rahasyam, her films with AkkineniNageswara Rao, were also successful. The first few of her Telugu films featured dubbing; for example, Krishna Kumari dubbed her voice in PandurangaMahatyam (1957) but in the subsequent years, Saroja Devi learned the Telugu language to deliver her own lines.

Late 1960s onwards, Saroja Devi's career in Tamil cinema gradually declined, and she became more active in Kannada movies. She continued to be among the highest paid actress in Kannada and Telugu films. She was cast opposite the leading acting legend Rajkumar in several Kannada films, including MallammaPavada (1969), NyayaveDevaru (1971), Sri SrinivasaKalyana (1974), Babruvahana (1977) and Bhagyavantharu (1977). Her other successful films from this period include ThandeMakkalu (1971), Papa Punya (1971), Gunavanthudu (1975), Katha Sangama (1976), Sri RenukadeviMahathme (1977), ShaniPrabhava (1977) and Rudranaga (1984). Saroja Devi received the Padma Sri, the fourth-highest civilian honour, in 1969 and Padma Bhushan, third highest civilian award, in 1992 from the Government of India.

Moutatthu Gopalakrishnan Unnithan (born 3 July 1941), commonly known as Adoor Gopalakrishnan, is an Indian film director, script writer, and producer. Adoor Gopalakrishnan had a major role in revolutionizing Malayalam cinema and is regarded as one of the finest filmmakers of India. Adoor's first film Swayamvaram (1972) pioneered the new wave cinema movement in Kerala. Most of his films go to festivals around the world, and are released in Kerala. All the eleven films he directed, from Swayamvaram to Oru Pennum Randaanum (2008), were screened at several international film festivals. He won National Film Awards sixteen times, Kerala State Film Awards seventeen times and also won several international film awards. He won the prestigious British Film Institute award for Elippathayam (1981). Adoor received the Padma Shri in 1984 and the Padma Vibhushan in 2006. The Nation honoured Adoor for his valuable contributions to Indian cinema by awarding him the highest cinema award of India, the Dadasaheb Phalke Award for the year 2004.

Gopalakrishnan was born on 3 July 1941 in the village of Pallickal near Adoor, present day Kerala. He started his artistic life as an actor in amateur plays when he was 8. Later he shifted his base to writing and direction and wrote and directed a few plays. After securing a degree in economics, political science and public administration in 1961 from the Gandhigram Rural Institute, he worked as a Government officer near Dindigul in Tamil Nadu. In 1962, he left his job to study screenwriting and direction from the Pune Film Institute. He completed his course from there with a scholarship from the Government of India. With his classmates and friends, Adoor established Chithralekha Film Society and Chalachithra Sahakarana Sangham; the organization was the first film society in Kerala and it aimed at production, distribution and exhibition of films in the co-operative sector. Adoor's debut film, the national award winning Swayamvaram (1972) was a milestone in Malayalam film history. The film was exhibited widely in various international film festivals including those held in Moscow, Melbourne, London and Paris. The films that followed: Kodiyettam, Elippathayam, Mukhamukham, Anantaram, Mathilukal, Vidheyam and Kathapurushan lived up to the reputation of his first film and were well received by critics at various film festivals and fetched him many awards. However, Mukhamukham was criticized in Kerala by the left while Vidheyam was at the centre of a debate due to the differences in opinion between the writer of story of the film, Paul Zachariah, and Adoor.

Adoor's later films are Nizhalkuthu, narrating the experiences of an executioner who comes to know that one of his subjects was innocent, and Naalu Penungal, a film adaptation of four short stories by Thakazhi Sivasankara Pillai. He has won the National award for best film twice, best director five times, and best script two times. His films have also won his actors and technicians several national awards. Adoor's third feature, Elippathayam won him the coveted British Film Institute Award for 'the most original and imaginative film' of 1982. The International Film Critics Prize (FIPRESCI) has gone to him six times successively for Mukhamukham, Anantharam, Mathilukal, Vidheyam, Kathapurushan and Nizhalkuthu. Winner of several international awards like the UNICEF film prize (Venice), OCIC film prize (Amiens), INTERFILM Prize (Mannheim) etc., his films have been shown in Cannes, Venice, Berlin, Toronto, London, Rotterdam and every important festival around the world.

ಮುಖಾಮುಖಂ MUKHAMUKHAM

Mrinal Sen (born 14, May, 1923) is an Indian filmmaker based in Kolkata. Along with his contemporaries Satyajit Ray and Ritwik Ghatak, he is often considered to be one of the greatest ambassadors of Indian parallel cinema on the global stage. Like the works of Ray and Ghatak, his cinema is known for its artistic depiction of social reality. Although the three directors shared a healthy rivalry, they were ardent admirers of each other's work, and in so doing, they charted the independent trajectory of parallel cinema, as a counterpoint to the mainstream fare of Hindi cinema in India. Sen was born on 14 May 1923, in the town of Faridpur, now in Bangladesh in a Hindu family. After finishing high school there, he left home to come to Calcutta as a student. He studied physics at the well-known Scottish Church College, and subsequently earned a postgraduate degree at the University of Calcutta. As a student, he got involved with the cultural wing of the Communist Party of India. Although he never became a member of the party, his association with the socialist Indian People's Theatre Association brought him close to a number of like-minded culturally associated people.

Mrinal Sen made his first feature film, Raat Bhore, in 1955. It had the iconic Uttam Kumar who was not a star then.. His next film, Neel Akasher Neechey (Under the Blue Sky), earned him local recognition, while his third film, Baishey Shraavan (the day when Rabindranath Tagore died), was his first film that gave him international exposure. After making five more films, he made a film with a shoe-string budget provided by the Government of India. This film, Bhuvan Shome (Mr. Shome), finally launched him as a major filmmaker, both nationally and internationally. Bhuvan Shome also initiated the "New Cinema" film movement in India.

The films that he made next were overtly political, and earned him the reputation as a Marxist artist. This was also the time of large-scale political unrest throughout India. Particularly in and around Calcutta, this period underwent what is now known as the Naxalite movement. This phase was immediately followed by a series of films where he shifted his focus, and instead of looking for enemies outside, he looked within his own middle class society. In many Mrinal Sen movies from Punascha to Mahaprithivi, Kolkata features prominently. He has shown Kolkata as a character, and as an inspiration. He has beautifully woven the people, value system, class difference and the roads of the city into his movies and coming of age for Kolkata.

During his career, Mrinal Sen's films have received awards from almost all major film festivals, including Cannes, Berlin, Venice, Moscow, Karlovy Vary, Montreal, Chicago, and Cairo. Retrospectives of his films have been shown in almost all major cities of the world. He was also elected as the president of the International Federation of the Film Societies. He received the Taj Enlighten Tareef Award which is given for a lifetime contribution to the world of cinema in 2008. He also received the Lifetime Achievement Award at the 10th edition of the Osian's Cinefest Film Festival 2008.

Lakshman Rao Mohite is better known by his pen-name Geethapriya. Lyricist and film-maker Geethapriya has carved a niche for himself in the Kannada film industry by offering a song for every section of society and directing in all genres. In his five-decade career as a lyricist and film-maker, he only cared for giving the best. He directed many top stars in Kannada, including Rajkumar and Vishnuvardhan, and launched several others. It was renowned music composer Vijaya Bhaskar, who brought him into the film world. He wrote his first song for Shri Rama Pooja in 1954. Since then, he penned songs for most of the films for which Vijaya Bhaskar scored music.

Manninamaga , starring Rajkumar, was his directorial debut in 1968. It got both box office and critical acclaim. It got National and state awards. Hombisilu directed by him, starring Vishnuvardhan, was a landmark film in the history of Kannada films. The film unveiled another face of Vishnuvardhan's talent. Other notable films of Geethapriya are Beluvalada Madilalli, Besuge, Hombisilu Putani Agent 123, Mouna Geete, Yava Janmada Maithri, and Anuraga Bandhana. He also directed three Tulu films and one Hindi film (Anmol Sitare). Shravana Sambhrama (2003) was his last film. In recognition of his contribution to Kannada film industry, Karnataka government honoured him by conferring him Puttanna Kanagal award in 1986.

Kikkeri Shamanna Lakshminarasimha Swamy (21 February 1939 - 20 October 2015), popularly known as K. S. L. Swamy / Lalitha Ravee / Ravee, was a film director, producer, actor and playback singer in the Kannada film industry, a multi-faceted personality who excelled at many sides of film-making. He entered cinema at an early age as an assistant to popular directors of the time such as G. V. Iyer and M. R. Vittal. He debuted as an independent film director with the 1966 film, Thoogudeepa. His other films such as Gandhinagara (1968) and Bhagya Jyothi (1975) and Malaya Marutha (1986) proved successful. His 1989 film Jamboo Savari won the National Film Award for Best Children's Film at the 37th National Film Awards.

Swamy was a close associate of director Puttanna Kanagal, and completed two of his films - Masanada Hoovu (1984) and the long delayed Saavira Mettilu that released in 2006, following the latter's death, which also turned out to be his own last directorial venture. Recognizing his tireless striving and his contribution to cinema, Swamy was awarded the Dr. B. Saroja Devi National Award in 2013. He was married to B. V. Radha, a former actress. He was also an adept singer well known for the song 'Suryangu Chandrangu' from the movie (by Puttanna Kanagal) Shubhamangala and 'Ille Swarga Ille Naraka' from the movie Naagara Hole. Swamy died on 20 October 2015 due to breathing complications at Bangalore.

S. Siddalingaiah was a leading Indian film director and writer in the Kannada film industry. He made his directorial debut in 1969 with Mayor Muthanna. He directed a large number of films including Bangaarada Manushya (1972) and Bhoothayana Maga Ayyu (1974). His films frequently starred the legendary actor Rajkumar. Siddalingaiah joined the film industry as a spot boy for Navajyothi studios. He became an assistant to director Shanker Singh and later worked as junior actor and assistant to B. Vittalacharya. After Bangaarada Manushya, he worked with other actors including Vishnuvardhan, Ananth Nag, Lokesh and Srinivasa Murthy. He introduced his son Murali in the 1983 romantic drama Prema Parva. He also directed a Tamil film Puthir in 1986 with Murali as the lead actor. His last film, Prema Prema Prema, was released in 1999 after which he retired from directing. In 1993-94, he was awarded the Puttanna Kanagal Award for his contribution to the Kannada film industry as a director.

If ever a tribute were to epitomize Siddalingaiah it is that he directed Kannada cinema's two greatest stars in their most remembered films. When he made Bangaarada Manushya, Rajkumar was at the height of his powers and the star had just appeared in classics like Kasthuri Nivasa (1971). In Bangaraada Manushya, Rajkumar plays his definitive role, one which was to even characterize him as a person - that of a family man who sacrifices personal happiness for the good of his kin and, when he finds them ungrateful, gives up his claim on the family property to walk away. There may be those who will contend that Vishnuvardhan's best role was in Puttanna Kanagal's Nagara Haavu (1972) but Bhoothayana Maga Ayyu may be the film in which he matured from youthful impetuosity to playing the roles he would be later known by - usually more romantic roles rather than the kind represented by Kanagal's film. Bhoothayana Maga Ayyu is about caste conflict and came out when India had been radicalized. The villain in this film is a Brahmin moneylender (played by MP Shankar) and it is his son Ayyu that the farmer played by Vishnuvardhan comes into conflict with. Ayyu is played by Lokesh, who had just given a sterling performance in Girish Karnad's Kaadu (1973) and Siddalingaiah was quick to spot the way two young actors with completely different personas - Vishnuvardhan and Lokesh - could be cast in the portrayal of social conflict.

Unfortunately for Siddalingaiah, his son Murali who was a very talented and sought-after actor passed away in 2010 from a massive heart attack but Murali's son (Siddalingaiah's grandson) Atharva is now a rising star in the Tamil film industry.

Synopsis

Bhootayya is an unpopular landlord and moneylender, hated by his fellow villagers for his stingy nature. His son, AYYU, is a carbon copy of his father. Devayya and his son, Gulls clash with Bhootayya's family because of a land dispute, which leads to an ugly battle of egos between the two sons. When a calamitous flood affects the entire village, and all the families suffer, Gulla saves Ayyu's wife's life, thereby ending the feud and uniting the entire village.

Curated by VIKALP

The Indian documentary scene is perhaps at its most exciting juncture in recent years. Apart from a couple of public institutions, filmmakers now have access to international grants and television funds and are being invited to International Film Festivals and are winning awards. However, given that the distribution network still thrives in alternative screening venues, documentary practices are not controlled by market considerations and continue to defy homogeneity. Doc@ Biffes brings together an eclectic selection of Indian and international documentaries, student films, environmental films with a focus on climate change and drought, and a retrospective of the works of noted Armenian filmmaker Harutyun Khachatryan.

The Indian Currents showcase a deeply personal aesthetic of filmmakers, as they negotiate a shifting personal-political framework. They speak multiple languages in diverse cinematic styles, but the stories are nevertheless moving, relevant and allow ample space for conversation.

The International Currents consist of five well-travelled films of the last two years. The films represent different regions of the world and uniquely diverse, original and engaging styles of documentary filmmaking, from cinema-verite to docu-drama, from activist to poetic. This will be the Indian premiere of all five films.

The films on the theme 'Climate Change and Drought' foreground the lives of those facing challenges in their fight for existence, either from changing weather patterns and a deteriorating environment or from continued extraction of resources from the earth in the name of development.

The Student Films represent some of the best work done by student filmmakers from different film schools in India. Giving us a glimpse of the diversity in subjects and approaches to filmmaking, these films offer a peek into what might be the future paradigms of documentary filmmaking in India.

The Retrospective section looks at the work of Harutyun Khachatryan, one of Armenia's most eminent directors. Known for his eloquent evocation of Armenian realities through compelling imagery and cinematography, Khachatryan, in all his films, remains faithful to his subject, the fate of his people and his country. Three of his most exciting films, spanning a decade will be part of the package.

Vikalp Bengaluru is a group of filmmakers, screening documentaries from India and all over the world since 2005. We strive to cultivate a vibrant community of documentary enthusiasts in Bengaluru. BEING BHAIJAAN

Being Bhaijaan explores Indian masculinity by mapping the emotional, spiritual and philosophical contribution Salman Khan makes in the lives of three men in small-town India, who find themselves increasingly disassociated with a changing country, its competitiveness, and its new woman. To find solace in a notion of manhood, constructed brick-by-brick, through a superstar's perceived personality, which is as old-world as Salman Khan's films.

FIREFLIES IN THE ABYSS

The 'rat-hole' mines in the Jaintia Hills of NorthEast India, are hostile pits where men and boys risk their lives everyday to scratch coal out of hard rock. Burrowing into narrow tunnels, they are armed with nothing more than a pickaxe and a torch. Each of them comes to the coalpit for different reasons. But once there, all of them are looking for a chance to breakout. Some are able to escape, most can't. Even with the odds stacked against him, Suraj, an 11-year old boy, grapples his way out of this abyss to eventually put himself in school. The film follows Suraj and several other miners whose lives intertwine with his, to reveal lives under extraordinary circumstances and the brutal choices they are forced to resolve at every turn of their lives.

About the Director

Chandrasekhar Reddy is an independent producer/director, having extensive experience in a variety of documentary formats – factual, developmental and environmental. Previous credits include films for National Geographic Asia, Discovery Asia, United Nations Development Program (UNDP), Ministry of Tourism GoI, and BBC/OU, UK. SMALL THINGS, BIG THINGS

Chikka Putta

In the small village of Silvepura, India, the alternative Sita School teaches children through emotion, creativity and social interaction. Opened in 1975 with an ambition to alleviate low attendance in the area, the school is a space where children can start at any time and learn through their surroundings. Director Saumyananda Sahi, who himself went to Sita School until he was 11 years old, gently observes the activities of the students and teachers for one year. As they express their experiences and memories—whether through puppet theatre or a time capsule buried for the future—the children's personalities shine through as they interact daily with their peers and teachers. Small Things, Big Things is a diaristic love letter to the benefits of a school that listens to what childhood can be.

About the Director

Born in Bangalore in 1986, Saumyananda Sahi was the youngest participant in the Talent Campus India (2004), and the Berlinale Talent Campus at the Berlin International Film Festival (2005). Over the last ten years Saumyananda has directed many short films, and worked as a cinematographer with directors such as Kamal Swaroop, Anne Aghion, Anamika Huksar, Deepa Dhanraj and Sunanda Bhat. He founded Skreen Films with his partner, Tanushree Das and is currently based in Goa, India.

THIS ROAD I KNOW

Captured as a personal narrative, 'This Road I Know' traverses the main highway that runs through the northeastern Indian states of Nagaland and Manipur, highlighting the changing experiences on the road over the years and introducing new dimensions and fears. It probes the complexities of identity while examining the ways violence is used there in so many ways. The region's militarization, and the effect that it has on people living there, is an obvious take-away from the film. But it also reflects a longing for a home that once was, nostalgia for the lost land of childhood and deep uncertainty about what is to come.

About the Director

Yirmiyan Arthur Yhome calls herself a part-time filmmaker. She holds a Masters in Mass Communication from the Mass Communication Research Centre, Jamia Millia Islamia, and makes the occasional film when she can. Mother of two, she enjoys very much her time with children and hopes to slowly deviate towards working in a child-related field. She is a Photo Editor with the Associated Press.

WHAT THE FIELDS REMEMBER

On 18th February 1983, from 9:00 am to 3:00 pm, more than 2000 Muslims were killed, homes were burnt down and fields destroyed in the town of Nellie and its surrounding villages in Assam, India. The documentary film What the Fields Remember revisits the Nellie massacre three decades later. From the survivors, Sirajuddin Ahmed and Abdul Khayer's, retelling of the event, and their struggles of coping with loss and memories that refuse to fade away, the film attempts to explore ideas of violence, memory and justice. It tries to understand how physical spaces that have witnessed the violence continue to mark people's relationship to history and memory. What the Fields Remember also attempts to raise larger questions around collective memory – of what we choose to remember and why we choose to forget.

SILENCE IN THE COURTS

Two women from rural Sri Lanka, sexually abused by a Judge nearly two decades ago, try in vain to seek justice. As their plea is turned down and subverted by the country's highest authorities, noted journalist Victor Ivan begins to write in-depth stories highlighting their plight, the state of the justice system and its lack of commitment to the downtrodden— to no avail. This film traces stories of these hapless women and the journalist twenty years on, and attempts to understand this shocking miscarriage of justice and how the powerful can sometimes be above the law.

THE SIREN OF FASO FANI

La sirène de Faso Fani

The film explores the disastrous consequences of global economic policies that are blind to local realities. The famous factory Faso Fani (BF) shut-down in 2001 threw hundreds out of work, plunged thousands into poverty and left an entire city reeling: Koudougou, where I was born. A decade after, I return to the city to meet the former workers. Stripped of their livelihood and pride they remain convinced that reviving the cotton industry can offer a viable future for the whole community. In this film I bring their dream to life: hearing once again the gentle thrum of the spinning machines

EARTH WITNESS: REFLECTIONS ON THE TIMES AND THE TIMELESSNESS

Four common people – a teacher, a farmer, a shepherd, a father – find themselves on the front line of the earth's biggest, most complex crisis: climate change. Belonging to India's ancient tribes, they bear witness to the science behind the changes that affect their daily lives. Living in diverse climatic regions – the mountains of Nagaland, the grasslands of Kutch, the Gangetic delta and the forests of Central India – they use this challenge as a part of their art with nature. Their lives journey through the dark labyrinths of the multidimensional crisis, reflecting stories of our times – of trees, mining, monkeys, logging, rivers, seeds, waterfalls, flowers – and the spirit of the timeless.

About the Director

Akanksha, in the nature of wandering minstrels, is a storyteller who uses film, sound, text and dance to share her experiences of the visible and inner worlds. She is also an award winning filmmaker and photographer whose oeuvre stretches from stories of courage and compassion - partition, communal violence - to spending four years on the banks of the Chilika Lake in Orissa. Her latest film registered over one lakh YouTube views in under a year, and has been an experiential exploration of the Indian Philosophy, 'Hindu Nectar: Spiritual Wanderings in India'. She films, edits, scripts and directs herself.

FAMINE '87

SATYAASHI NO DUKAL

For centuries, the grasslands in an otherwise arid region of North-Western Gujarat, bordering Pakistan, have been home to the Maldharis, a predominantly Muslim community of traditional cattle grazers. Fifty years after India's independence the entire pastoral community is under threat of extinction from natural calamities and human intervention in the name of development. In the fourth successive year of drought an entire population has been reduced to digging ditches and carrying mud - surviving on dole. During this retelling of peoples' histories, what emerges is an understanding of the larger causes of scarcities and famines, and the need to review the very processes of planning and development.

About the Director

The documentary was the result of five individuals with a shared concern for the land and people of the Banni region of Kutch. The entire team of the PRAKRIT MEDIA COLLECTIVE shares the credit for making the documentary. The central idea behind the Collective was to look at alternative media practices, while also engaging with other social and political initiatives at the grassroots levels.

Sud Eau Nord Déplacer SOUTH TO NORTH

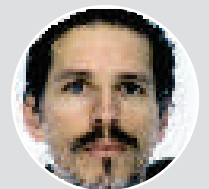

The Nan Shui Bei Diao (South Water North Move), designed to move water from the south to the north of China, is the biggest water transfer project the world has ever seen. Charting the path of this national construction project, the film maps the turbulent cartography of a territory where cement defeats the plains, rivers are deviated from their natural course, deserts become forests, and people gradually become vocal, demanding justice and the right to speak out. While matter decomposes and individuals grow alarmed, a science-fiction landscape, against nature, is reconstituted.

About the Director

Antoine Boutet is a French filmmaker and a visual artist. His videos and installations – urban landscape factories perforated by ant mazes, impossible bridges and canals, walled up tourist attractions – can be seen in numerous art galleries and museums. Through his documentary, he offers us a new take on his work on the political transformation of landscapes and endeavours to collect the imprint of an uncertain future.

THIS CHANGES EVERYTHING

Filmed in nine countries and five continents over four years, THIS CHANGES EVERYTHING is an epic attempt to re-imagine the vast challenge of climate change. Inspired by Naomi Klein's international non-fiction bestseller book 'This Changes Everything', the film presents seven powerful portraits of communities on the front lines, from Montana's Powder River Basin to the Alberta Tar Sands, from the coast of South India to Beijing and beyond. Interwoven with these stories of struggle is Klein's narration, connecting the carbon in the air with the economic system that put it there.

WIND OF CHANGE

Many parts of Eastern Africa experienced the worst drought the region had seen in over 60 years. This documentary gives the effect of the drought a human face by bringing us into the life of Kisilu Musya – a strong and caring Kenyan farmer and family man – with big dreams, and visions for the family and their future. Through beautiful images, and Kisilu's own video diary, we are brought up close and into the story of a man and his family, who continue to fight against both global and local human-induced climate change, refusing to give up.

This story takes place in the post-soviet period, after the Armenian-Azeri conflict. This could be described as a time when a huge empire was being ruined and different conflicts raised between nations. The film tells about a village situated near the conflict zone, where the benefactor of Armenian descent from America opened a charitable canteen and a nearby farm where refugees from different places worked. The story begins when the villagers find a buffalo lost in the snow, semibrutal and half alive. They bring the buffalo to the farm, where it is regarded as a stranger and treated as an enemy by the dogs guarding the farm, animals gathered from here and there and farmers and refugees tired from the war who became brutal because of the far away explosions. We see the village life during the whole year through the eyes of the buffalo. Summer . autumn ... and winter pass. The weathers change, but the monotonous life in the village goes on slowly. Following the buffalo we see the life surrounding the farm and the village.

Between 1988 and the first years of the 1990s, three events shook Armenia: a terrible earthquake, the Nagorno-Karabakh war and the break-up of the Soviet Union. Following this, many people chose the path of exile. It's from these same years that Harutyun Khachatryan begins his painful exploration of the alienation and uprooting induced by this kind of event. He decides to follow the path of one of these men, a man of the theatre who went elsewhere in search both of the absolute that art can provide and of peace of mind. He has spent a large part of his life in north-eastern Siberia and is now stuck in Moscow, waiting to cover the last stage of his return to Armenia, the country of his family and his ancestors. Through comings and goings in time and space, the filmmaker recounts a deeply moving epic tale of a rebellious man, an extraordinary storyteller whose mental and physical space are diminishing with age.

RETURN OF THE POET

POETI VERADARDZE

Poet and philosopher Jivany is one of the renowned personalities of the Armenian culture of 19-20th centuries. His power lies in his clear thinking, philosophic outlook, desire to bequeath irreproachably the coming day to the generations and in the idea to be freed from complexities and formalities. He opposes at the same time the culture and himself with a great sense of humor, sarcasm. The film is about modern Armenia seen through Jivany's eyes and shot under a critical glance. The film is the documentary study of the modern life and documents the creation of Jivany's monument, transportation of his monument from Yerevan, the capital of Armenia, to Javakhk – Jivany's birthplace, the "impressions" of the filming crew on the way to Javakhk and installation of the monument. Thus, the main hero of the film is not a human being but a monument, travelling is the most beloved and natural environment for film and unpredictability of development of film plot – these are the main principles of the director's conception which make the film seem fresh and are responsible for its dramatic composition.

ALPAJEEVI

Based in the little Rann of Kutch, Alpajeevi, meaning short-lived, takes a look into the unique lifestyle of two families - one a decaying royal family and the other salt-cultivating Agaria workers - and the interaction with their homes. An unfolding of the polarity between the grandeur and simplicity, the old and the new, the non-rural and the rural brings the narrative together in simplistic and lyrical manner.

About the Director

Naomi Shah is documentary film-maker. She received her diploma in Digital Video Production from the Srishti Institute of Art, Design and Technology in 2015. In addition to working on her own films, she has contributed to films made on the Forest Rights Act and the agricultural and fisheries sector in India, produced by Srishti Films. Her own films include work with communities such as the Raikas, the Maldharis and the Agarias in parts of Kutch and Rajasthan

Khala ke Yahan

AT KHALA'S

The film is about space and counter space, place and displacement, time and timelessness, domesticity and seclusion, and words and wordlessness. Khala, an immigrant from Bangladesh, runs a teashop, which in the dead of night remodels itself into a domicile for Khala and her seven sons. This 'home' breathes in the ancient city of Mehrauli in Delhi and shares its walls with Disco Baba shrine (with homed drifters and promises of the other world) and the secretive step well of sulphur, which hides within its depths and timelessness, the unreality of its surroundings.

About the Director

Varun Trikha was trained as an ethicist at King's College London and as a nonfiction filmmaker in Delhi. Varun was first Indian to represent the country in Estonia for a program for journalists and media practitioners. His thesis film "The Seventh Wish" has won a couple of awards including best direction at NSFA by Ministry of I & B and has been screened at several international film festivals including Yamagata international documentary film festival. Varun Ajrawat is a civil engineer from Jammu and Kashmir, has studied non fiction and is currently based in Delhi . He is presently working on a documentary about a fisher man's family living in Sri Lanka . His student project was screened at several film festivals.

Synopsis

Struggling French writer Emile Zola is more concerned about exposing social and public injustices through his writing than he is about earning a living. However, he does ultimately become a success as a writer, and as a result lives a life of comfort and class. Late in his life, he, on the most part, places his life as a social crusader behind him. Late in the nineteenth century, French Captain Alfred Dreyfus, adamantly professing his innocence, is accused, tried and convicted of treason against the French republic and banished to Devil's Island. New information comes to light of Dreyfus' innocence, information suppressed by the French military in the name of protecting public morale and information which is brought to Zola's attention by Mme. Dreyfus. Initially not wanting to get involved, Zola decides to reignite his social consciousness by defending Dreyfus in the court of public opinion, at the risk of his own personal standing and safety

ABOUT THE DIRECTOR

William Dieterle was a German actor and film director, who worked in Hollywood for much of his career. His best known films include THE DEVIL AND DANIEL WEBSTER, THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR and THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME.

90 YEARS OF FILM CRITICISM

Criticism is an ancient and revered art form. Pretty much since stories were first written, other people were writing down their opinions about those stories. Similarly, film criticism has been around since the advent of cinema itself and way back in the early 1900s early reviewers sometimes used this venue as a way to break into other film-related jobs. Since cinema got into the stable classical mould around 1925 in the US and elsewhere, criticism began around the same period. If you wanted to get a job as a screenwriter or director, starting off in criticism made a lot of sense. That's something that hasn't really changed over the last century, as it is just as prevalent now for film school students to blog about their career exploits and cinematic musings online in order to increase their chances of being noticed.

Film criticism is the analysis and evaluation of films and the film medium. In general, it can be divided into journalistic criticism such as appears regularly in newspapers and other popular, mass-media outlets and academic criticism by film scholars that is informed by film theory and published in academic journals. By the 1930s, as film transformed from a Vaudeville curiosity into a more mainstream form of entertainment, the media started doing film reviews more frequently. At first, these reviewers were journalists diverted from the sports section or some other part of the paper, but pretty soon dedicated film reviewers were providing coverage of new releases and offering up their opinions about Hollywood news. During that time, famous critics like Otis Ferguson and James Agee plied their trade in local newspapers. For years, film criticism was as much about the critic as the film. Critique was an art form and an opportunity for the critic to place a few beautiful turns of phrase and insightful comments in the context of a review. Since there would usually be only one reviewer per local paper, that individual's opinion held great sway over the viewers in the area-it wasn't too easy to get a second opinion. Movies, like restaurants and hotels, were rated with stars, and a four-or-five-star rating was a sign of a worthwhile film. Film critics working for newspapers, magazines, broadcast media, and online publications, mainly review new releases, although some reviewers include reviews of older "classic" films. The plot summary and description of a film that makes up the majority of the review can have an impact on whether people decide to see a film. In recent times, the impact reviews have on a film's box office performance and DVD rentals/sales have become a matter for debate although that itself is up for debate. There are those who think modern movie marketing, using pop culture convention appearances and social media along with traditional means of advertising, have become so invasive and well financed that established reviewers with legitimate criticism cannot be heard over the din of popular support. Moreover, this has led, in part, to a decline in the readership of many reviewers for newspapers and other print publications. The vast majority of film critics on television and radio have all but disappeared over the last thirty years, as well. It can be observed that most of the discussion of film on television is focused on the amount of box office business a film does, as if financial success were the only criterion needed to define artistic success. Today arts criticism in general does not hold the same place it once held with the general public.

Today, fan-run film analysis websites like Box Office Prophets and Box Office Guru routinely factor in general public film review opinion with those of more experienced reviewers in their projections of a film. Other websites, such as Rotten Tomatoes, combines all reviews on a specific film published online and in print to come up with an aggregated rating known as a "freshness rate." Some well-known journalistic critics have included: James Agee (Time magazine, The Nation); James Berardinelli; Vincent Canby (The New York Times); Roger Ebert (Chicago Sun-Times,) Mark Kermode (BBC); Pauline Kael (The New Yorker); Derek Malcolm (The Guardian); Michael Phillips (Chicago Tribune); and Joel Siegel (Good Morning America). Academic criticism is entirely different. More often known as film theory or film studies, the academic critique explores cinema beyond journalistic film review. These film critics try to examine why film works, how it works, what it means, and what effects it has on people. Rather than write for mass-market publications their articles are usually published in scholarly journals and texts which tend to be affiliated with university presses; or sometimes in up-market magazines. Some notable academic film critics include André Bazin, Jean-Luc Godard and François Truffaut (all writers for Cahiers du Cinéma); Kristin Thompson, David Bordwell, and Sergei Eisenstein. Much academic criticism is theory-down and affiliated to schools - like psychoanalysis, structuralism and cultural studies. This means that in this kind of criticism it is a theoretical viewpoint which is argued out and judgment of a film is not primary.

The advent of the internet has transformed the meaning of journalistic criticism by making it widely accessed. Some websites, such as Rotten Tomatoes and Metacritic, seek to improve the usefulness of film reviews by compiling them and assigning a score to each in order to gauge the general reception a film receives. Other sites such as Spill.com review sites with ratings such as "rent it" or "matinée" to tell the viewer in what setting to watch the film rather than a numerical score. The Online Film Critics Society, an international professional association of Internet-based cinema reviewers, consists of writers from all over the world. A number of websites allow Internet users to submit movie reviews and scores to allow a broad consensus review of a movie. Some websites specialize in narrow aspects of film reviewing. For instance, there are sites that focus on specific content advisories for parents to judge a film's suitability for children. Others focus on a religious perspective (e.g. CAP Alert). Still others highlight more esoteric subjects such as the depiction of science in fiction films. Blogging has also introduced opportunities for a new wave of amateur film critics to have their opinions heard widely. The argument may be that since films are so widely seen opinions on film should also be widely heard. These review blogs may focus on one genre, director or actor, or encompass a much wider variety of films. Friends, friends of friends, or complete strangers are able to visit these sites, and can often leave their own comments about the movie and/or the author's review. Although much less frequented than their professional counterparts, these sites can gather a following of like-minded people who look to specific bloggers for reviews as they have found that the critic consistently exhibits an outlook very similar to their own.

SOUND DESIGN

Sound design is the process of specifying, acquiring, manipulating or generating audio elements. It is employed in a variety of disciplines including filmmaking, television production, theatre, sound recording and reproduction, live performance, sound art, post-production, radio and video game software development. Sound design most commonly involves the manipulation of previously composed or recorded audio, such as sound effects and dialogue. In some instances it may also involve the composition or manipulation of audio to create a desired effect or mood. Possibly the first use of recorded sound in the theatre was a phonograph playing a baby's cry in a London theatre in 1890. Sixteen years later, Herbert Beerbohm Tree used recordings in his London production of Stephen Phillips' tragedy NERO. The event is marked in the Theatre Magazine (1906) with two photographs; one showing a musician blowing a bugle into a large horn attached to a disc recorder, the other with an actor recording the agonizing shrieks and groans of the tortured martyrs. The article states: "these sounds are all realistically reproduced by the gramophone". As cited by Bertolt Brecht, there was a play about Rasputin written in (1927) by Alexei Tolstoy and directed by Erwin Piscator that included a recording of Lenin's voice. Over the course of the twentieth century the use of recorded sound effects began to take over from live sound effects, though often it was the stage manager's duty to find the sound effects and an electrician played the recordings during performances. But even though the sound designer has basically assumed these roles, time and technology have not ruled out non-sound designers having a hand in sound production. For instance, since today's audiences are savvier and can readily distinguish between live and recorded sounds, live backstage sound effects are still used (e.g. gunshots) by the stage manager (or assistant stage manager) for premium 'aural illusion'.

MIDI and digital audio technology helped to drive the rapid evolution of sound design during the 1980s and 1990s. Features of computerized theatre sound design systems were recognized as being essential for live show control systems at Walt Disney World and, as a result, Disney utilized systems of that type to control many facilities at their Disney-MGM Studios theme park, which opened in 1989. These features were incorporated into the MIDI Show Control (MSC) specification, an open communications protocol used to interact with diverse devices. The first show to fully utilize the MSC specification was the Magic Kingdom Parade at Walt Disney World's Magic Kingdom in September, 1991. Also, the World Wide Web has greatly enhanced the ability of sound designers to acquire source material quickly, easily and cheaply. Nowadays, a designer can preview and download crisper, more "believable" sounds as opposed to toiling through time- and budget-draining "shot-in-the-dark" searches through record stores, libraries and "the grapevine" for (often) inferior recordings. In addition, software innovation has enabled sound designers to take more of a DIY (or "do-it-yourself") approach. From the comfort of their home and at any hour, they can simply use a computer, speakers and headphones rather than renting (or buying) costly equipment or studio space and time for editing and mixing. This provides for faster creation and negotiation with the director. In motion picture production, a Sound Designer is a member of a film crew responsible for some original aspect of the film's audio. In the American film industry, the title of Sound Designer is not controlled by any industry organization, unlike titles such as Director or Screenwriter. The terms sound design and Sound Designer were introduced to the film world in 1972. The title of Sound Designer was first granted to Walter Murch by Francis Ford Coppola in recognition for Murch's extraordinary contributions to the film Apocalypse Now. The original meaning of the title Sound Designer, as established by Coppola and Murch, was "an individual ultimately responsible for all aspects of a film's audio track, from the dialogue and sound effects recording to the re-recording (mix) of the final track". The position of Sound Designer emerged in a manner similar to that of Production Designer, which was created in the 1930s when William Cameron Menzies made revolutionary contributions to the craft of art direction in the making of Gone with the Wind.

The sound designer is a principal member of the production staff, with creative authority equal to that of the film editor and director of photography. Firstly cinema sound systems became capable of high-fidelity reproduction, particularly after the adoption of Dolby Stereo. These systems were originally devised as gimmicks to increase theater attendance, but their widespread implementation created a content vacuum that had to be filled by competent professionals. Before stereo soundtracks, film sound was of such low fidelity that only the dialogue and occasional sound effects were practical. The greater dynamic range of the new systems, coupled with the ability to produce sounds at the sides or behind the audience, required more creativity. Directors wanted to realize the new potentials of the medium. The role of sound designer can be compared with the role of supervising sound editor; many sound designers use both titles interchangeably. The role of supervising sound editor, or sound supervisor, developed in parallel with the role of sound designer. The demand for more sophisticated soundtracks was felt both inside and outside Hollywood, and the supervising sound editor became the head of the large sound department, with a staff of dozens of sound editors, that was required to realize a complete sound job with a fast turnaround. It is far from universal, but the role of sound supervisor descends from the original role of the sound editor, that of a technician required to complete a film, but having little creative authority. Sound designers, on the other hand, are expected to be creative, and their status is comparable to the other creative department heads.

The masterclass on Sound Design with Resul Pookutty will be held on Friday, January 29th, 2:30-5:00 pm

Resul Pookutty is an award-winning sound designer, sound editor and mixer. Along with Richard Pryke and Ian Tapp, Pookutty won an Academy Award for Best Sound Mixing for the film SLUMDOG MILLIONAIRE. He has worked on Hollywood, Hindi and Tamil Films.

SOUND, IMAGERY AND SYMBOLISM IN THE FILMS OF HARUTYUN KHACHATRYAN

A master-class by the filmmaker on three-and-a-half decades of non-fiction filmmaking

Armenian director Harutyun Khachatryan dwells on the themes that have preoccupied him over the years, the medium he has chosen to express himself in and the formal elements of his narratives. Starting with a broad overview of Armenian documentary films, Khachatryan talks about how he came to make films, why certain topics fascinate him and whom his films are for. He goes on to talk about the responsibilities of a documentarist and the language of his cinema. Many of his films use sounds, music and symbols, rather than words and Khachatryan talks about how he maintains the “atmosphere of time”. He thinks of his films as confessions rather than descriptions.

The masterclass on the films of Harutyun Khachatryan, conducted by the filmmaker, will be held on Saturday, January 30th, 5:00-6:00 pm

Harutyun Khachatryan is an Armenian film director, script writer, director of photography and film producer. His films have been awarded prizes at various prestigious international film festivals. In 2003, he received the Armenian Government Award and obtained recognition as Honored Artist of the Republic of Armenia.

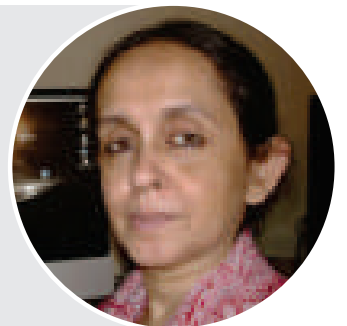

THE PRACTICE OF CREATIVE DOCUMENTARY

The What, How and Why of documentary.

The understanding of documentary and the forms it can inhabit has been severely constrained for various reasons, particularly in pedagogy – resulting in a strange anomaly between the practice of documentary (that has an immense range and richness) and the learning/teaching of it. At the Creative Documentary course we try to make a small move to start amending that. And so we look at documentary as being capable of much more than is commonly imagined, and suggest that the constraints just may be of our own making. The session explores what the word documentary means, or could mean. We discuss the nature of the ‘document’, modes and choices in representation, documentary tropes and the interpretative qualities inherent in documentary, through discussion and film clips.

The masterclass on the practice of Creative Documentary, conducted by Sameera Jain, will be held on Sunday, January 31st, 2:30-5:00 pm

Sameera Jain is an editor and filmmaker who has worked on numerous award winning documentaries and fiction feature films. Her own directorial ventures Portraits of Belonging, Born at Home and Mera Apna Sheher have been recognised for cinematic excellence at many national and international festivals. She has been on film juries and participated in curriculum formulation at various institutions. She has mentored film students and filmmakers on diverse platforms and has been invited to teach filmmaking at many places, including her alma mater FTII. She has conceptualized, and is Course Director of the Creative Documentary Course in New Delhi.

V K MURTHY MEMORIAL LECTURE

Concept of 'Realism' in Indian Cinematography

The finest in art reaches out to the higher truth which is metaphysical in nature. Irrespective of the art-form, this is the real purpose of all art. The fact that this central inner core which is known as 'Saatvika' is lying dormant within us (as in the spectator as well as the creator) and we have to reach out to it deploying external, tangible tools judiciously is what makes ART such an engrossing experience. When you arrive at it, the joy of having arrived is, quite simply, indescribable. Cinematography, as an art-form, is in no way an exception to this phenomenon.

The end of the Second World War can be seen as a water-shed in the evolution of many art-forms and it is equally true of Cinematography as well. The war wreaked havoc and left an indelible scar on the collective psyche of the people of Europe which had to bear the brunt of the attack during the war. Thus, it was only natural that the creative work in European Cinema chose to probe deeper into the wounded psyche of the Modern man. The grim realities of the war forced these artists to meditate upon the very nature of existence. They tried to discover 'The Inner Reality' that is hidden within the external façade of what appeared to be 'Real'. The well-known cinematic expositions of 'Italian Neorealism' and 'Nouvelle Vague' of French cinema inspired similar and meaningful cinematic expressions elsewhere and Indian Cinema was no exception. In fact, with 'Neecha Nagar' in 1946, Chetan Anand and his Cinematographer, Dr. Vidyapati Ghosh had already embarked upon the voyage of discovery that would herald a new beginning in Indian Cinema. This upward movement found a consolidation in Satyajit Ray's 'Pather Panchali'. This film was to be the harbinger of 'Classical Realism' in Indian Cinema.

In an essay titled 'A long time on the little road', Satyajit Ray puts on record the gleanings from his initial tryst with the motion picture camera. He was to discover on the very first day of his shoot the eternal truth embedded in a cinematic image. Even as he captured a pretty picture of Durga, the protagonist of the scene, in the lush grass-fields, he felt that 'It was an irresistible image'. When it was processed and projected in front of his eyes, he was horrified to discover the fact that the (pictorial) beauty of the shot had indeed overwhelmed the scene. This incident taught him instantly that "A shot is beautiful only if it is right in its context, and the rightness has little to do with what appears beautiful to the eye." Consequently, he was to say, "There is no such thing as 'Good Photography' per se. It is either right for a certain kind of film, and therefore 'Good' or wrong - however lush, well-composed, meticulous - and therefore, 'Bad'."* Ray's first Cinematographer, Subroto Mitra was his alter-ego on these voyages of enlightenment. Subroto's penchant for photographic realism was such that he had once described De Sica's 'Bicycle Thieves' as "Cartier-Bresson in Motion."* Ray was highly supportive of Subroto Mitra's untiring efforts in articulating the reality that presents itself in front of the lens. He was to record his appreciation in the following words: "Subroto, my Cameraman, has evolved, elaborated and perfected a system of diffused lighting whereby natural daylight can be simulated to a reasonable degree. This results in a photographic style which is truthful, unobtrusive and modern. I have no doubt that for films in the realistic genre, this is a most admirable system."*

V K Murthy (1923-2013) is revered as an exceptional genius of Indian cinema. Along with that of Subroto Mitra, his work forms the fulcrum of Modern Indian Cinematography. In the company of the legendary filmmaker, Gurudutt, he re-defined the visual aesthetic of Indian Cinema. His unparalleled camerawork in movies such as JAAL, PYASA, KAGAZ KE PHOOL, CHAUDAVIN KA CHAND and SAHIB BIBI AUR GULAM has earned for him a place in the Hall of Fame among the all-time greats of Indian Cinema. His articulation of the subliminal, his intricate visual compositions, his visual palette in monochrome, his joyful play of light & shade have all come together to render these films as all-time classics. His contribution to the evolution of Indian Cinematography earned for V K Murthy the prestigious Dada Phalke award. He is the only Cinematographer till date to have received the coveted award. The fact that V K Murthy was born in Mysore and studied Cinematography at Sri Jayachamarajendra Polytechnic in Bengaluru, the country's first film school, is a matter of great pride for all Bangaloreans. Hence, it is only but natural that BIFFES should be dedicating an academic chapter of the festival to the legendary cinematographer. The tribute to the Master-craftsman justifies the claim of BIFFES to being one of the few festivals in the world that highlight the contribution of the Cinematographer. BIFFES commissioned the V K Murthy memorial lecture series in 2014 and it was inaugurated by none other than Mr. Govind Nihalani, the ardent disciple of V K Murthy. The inaugural lecture placed before you a brief overview of 'The Evolution of Indian Cinematography'. It was presented jointly by Mr. Govind Nihalani, ISC and Mr. Sunny Joseph, ISC and was complemented by a lecture on 'Digital Cinema for the next gen' by Mr. Piyush Shah, ISC. The second lecture of the series, 'Concept of 'Realism' in Indian Cinematography' to be delivered by Mr. Anil Mehta, ISC is yet another step in the direction of understanding the unique nature of Indian Cinematography.

Cinematography, as an art-form, has at its disposal the tangible tools of 'Realism' and 'Stylisation' to interpret the reality that is positioned in front of the lens. (We must tread very carefully here as otherwise we will get caught up in the labyrinth of discourses such as 'What is Reality?'; 'Does the same Reality present itself as a different picture to each one of us? Etc.'). It is extremely important to remember here that the perspective from which you perceive a given reality decides the nature of that Reality. The words of Master film-maker Satyajit Ray are sure to enlighten those of us who consider that small little thing, the magic-box called Camera as innocuous!! In his essay he recalls with amused irony how he had told himself that after all, the camera is merely a recording instrument. But he was to discover to his horror how wrong he was on the very first day of his tryst with the petite machine!! He was to say later, "The three-legged instrument takes charge. Problems come thick and fast. Where to place the camera? High or low? Near or Far? On the dolly or on the ground? Is the 35mm lens OK or a 50mm? Get too close- the emotion spills over; get too far back and the thing becomes cold and remote."* If these questions can perplex a man who was destined to become one of the all-time greats in world cinema, you can imagine the complexities that can prove to be daunting while engaging oneself with cinematography.

Fortunately for what we can proudly term as 'Modern Indian Cinematography', two legendary masters presented themselves on the scene as contemporaries and paved the way for us to move forward with little or no difficulty. The fact that each of them admired the work of the other greatly even as they differed in the choice of the tool laid a solid foundation for Indian Cinematography. Subroto who was self-taught chose 'Classical Realism' as his forte whereas the academically trained V K Murthy, in gay abandon, preferred to make the light dance to his tune and worked in the realm of 'Enhanced Realism'. The Indian cinematographers of the succeeding generations have discovered that VK's phenomenal contribution in redefining the visual aesthetic and the treasure-trove that Subroto has left behind together form the bedrock of Indian Cinematography as we experience it today.

While the debate continues on the validity of a 'Given' particular style, it is worth recalling the words of Subroto Mitra which are of great relevance to the artist inside every cinematographer: 'I was told by an eminent eye-surgeon that "we do not see with our eyes - we actually see with our brains." This is also very true of photography.'*

The V K Murthy Memorial Lecture by Cinematographer Anil Mehta will be held on Saturday, January 30th, 2:30-5:00 pm

Anil Mehta, ISC

Mr. Anil Mehta, is a graduate of the prestigious Film & TV Institute of India. Like many of his contemporaries, he had the twin-advantage of learning the precepts of 'Classical Realism' from the legendary Subroto Mitra and the art of achieving 'Enhanced Realism' by studying the works of the Master-craftsman, VK Murthy. He honed his sensibilities further under the watchful eye of the renowned cinematographer, Mr. Barun Mukherjee serving the advertising and corporate film sectors. But soon the feature film industry beckoned him and in no time, put him in the company of the most sought-after cinematographers. If his masterly work in the romantic entertainer 'HUM DIL DE CHUKE SANAM' proved to be the fore-runner of many glossy entertainers from his arsenal, his creative upsurge in 'LAGAAN' earned for him a huge fan-following even among the common cine-goer. His foray in the mainstream in the company of stalwarts such as Yash Chopra, Sanjay Leela Bhansali, Ashutosh Gowariker, Karan Johar and Imtiaz among others has produced several huge box-office success stories. He has made a successful transition to the Digital Cinema Medium through his most recent film, 'HIGHWAY'.

He is the current president of WICA and heads the federation of Indian Cinematographers' associations as well. The eighth edition of BIFFES is proud to host the V K Murthy Memorial Lecture to be addressed by this phenomenal cinematographer. We are grateful to Mr. Anil Mehta for having accepted our invitation.
